The Games People Play

The ball game of Ga-Ga either came from Israel and means “touch-touch” in Hebrew, or it was invented by a 17-year-old camp counselor from Maryland. Either way, the game is sweeping the YMCAs and camps of America. It takes place in the Ga-Ga pit, an octagonally-shaped arena with two-foot-high walls. Kids enter the pit, each touching a wall. A bouncy ball similar to a kickball is thrown in, and players are then free to hit the ball on the bounce, never catching it, in an attempt to hit opposing players below the knee. The last player in the pit is the winner.

Household Tips

Ironing is a chore, yet a necessary one if you want to avoid appearing disheveled in public. Buttons may be one of the most frustrating parts of ironing, as heat can break delicate buttons, which then damage the iron. One trick is to flip the fabric over and iron the underside instead of putting heat directly on the button. Another trick is to use a hair straightener to iron the fabric between buttons. The smaller ironing surface might make it easier to navigate around those pesky fasteners.
