Today is Bikini Day, thanks to French fashion designer Louis Réard's invention of the scandalous swimsuit in 1946. However, ancient mosaics found in Sicily, dating back to 300 AD, depict women in bikini-type garments.

The Games People Play

During the 1800s, lumberjacks floated logs downstream to sawmills. As they worked the logs downriver, the men would hop from log to floating log. This activity led to the competitive sport of logrolling, which held its first unofficial world championship in 1898 in Omaha, Nebraska. In the sport, two opponents climb onto the same log and attempt to knock each other off. At first, contestants wore spiked shoes on wood logs, but times have changed. Rollers now use manufactured logs covered in a synthetic "carpet." Rubber-soled shoes enhance the roller's grip.
