

THE DAILY CHRONICLE

THURSDAY, JULY 16, 2020

Today is Guinea Pig Day. Guinea pigs were once wild animals that lived in South America. They were domesticated by the Incas 3,000 years ago and bred as pets, raised for food, and even used as sacrifices to the gods.

Think-tionary

opsonium

A. Any food used as a relish, like a chutney or

B. The a cappella recordings of church chants or hymns

ANSWER: A. I enjoy a great number of opsoniums atop my afternoon toast.

Who Am I?

My father introduced me to golf at the age of two. I was a golf prodigy, and throughout my childhood I won a multitude of youth tournaments with record-breaking scores. In 1996, at age 20, I turned professional and became Sports Illustrated's Sportsman of the Year. I didn't even win my first major, the Masters, until 1997! Over my career, I have won 15 golf majors and 82 PGA Tour events and have even been awarded the Medal of Freedom. Who am I?

ANSWER: Tiger Woods

Wild Kingdom

At the Pairi Daiza Zoo in Belgium, a family of orangutans has befriended the group of otters living in the river that runs through their enclosure. Orangutans and otters are both curious species, so the interactions are highly entertaining and mutually beneficial. Orangutans, as extremely intelligent apes, need lots of mental stimulation. The otters' frequent visits provide plenty of novelty. Belgium's Pairi Daiza isn't the only zoo where orangutans and otters live side by side; the two species also share an enclosure—and a strong bond—at the Singapore Zoo.

Buy a Vowel

_ N _ _ S P _ C _ _ _ S

Not lucky or ill-omened

ANSWER: INAUSPICIOUS