Approximate Weight: 34 lbs.

Good with Cats? Unknown (paperwork says yes).

Not great with kids, elaborate: Mac would do best with kids over 5 years due to his strength and size.

Crate trained? Other - elaborate below.

Housebroken? Yes

Energy Level: (active, moderate, etc.) Active

Training: (e.g., sit, come, working on jumping) Mac is a quick learner and super responsive to training! He sits, stays, comes when foster mom calls, and is doing well with not jumping. At times, he can get nervous with other dogs so slow introductions are best. Mac has never been crated, but he is not destructive if given free reign. Mac can be anxious if in a room alone, but he will eventually settle.

My Foster is already: Neutered (Male), Up-to-date on Vaccines, Heart Worm Checked.

Does your foster have any special medical needs or surgery needs? (besides spay/neuter) Mac is allergic to chicken and also experiences seasonal allergies during the spring and summer months—treated with OTC antihistamines and Cytopoint injections, and topical wipes on feet and for tear stains.

MORE INFO: Mac is the son to Ginger OHO-1542. They are NOT a bonded pair, as they do best with INDIVIDUAL ATTENTION SEPARATE FROM EACH OTHER.

Mac is a gentle giant with a huge personality. He loves playing ball, carrying around a Flexibone Nylabone like a cigar, and running along the fence with the neighbor dogs. Mac plays hard and sleeps hard. Despite Mac's large stature, he acts like a lap dog and loves to be curled up on his human. When ready to settle down, he will paw at foster mom for extra pets and then burrow under the covers next to her and sleep.

If you are lucky enough to adopt Mac, he will rise every morning with a toy shoved in your face and excitedly whine to let you know it's a new day of play! Mac is a strong, loyal boy, who is super responsive to training and comes to foster mom whenever called. He would love to have a backyard so he can chase those pesky squirrels and birds and keep his human(s) safe. Overall, Mac is a playful, curious, and happy guy who would do well with an active family where he is included in activities and is the center of attention.
