More Info: Sierra is a good girl but she needs a lot of time and patience. She was a puppy mill dog and didn't have a lot of interaction with people. When she came to us, she didn't come out of her crate. She is slowly learning to trust people and becoming familiar with a collar and leash. Sierra is very scared of loud noises and she is also afraid of kids. A home with children is not recommended. She's doesn't like fast movements. She will sniff you and if she feels safe, will let you pet her. She uses pee pads currently and is not house trained. When putting on her leash, she will not walk outside and has to be carried. She just wants to go right back in the house. Sierra will need someone who is will to work with her. She is not a dog that will sit on the couch with you. I have a room that she stays in so she spends quite a bit of time there. She doesn't play with toys but she will chew on a bone a little and she has shown interest in playing with my dog. Sierra needs slow introductions when meeting new dogs.
