

Adrienne Krunich

PWC WATCH Editor pwcinc.watch@gmail.com

Adrienne Krunich is our Managing Editor for PWC's publication "The Watch". Inspired by her late grandmother's love of aviation, Adrienne has always been looking to the sky. With a combined air traffic control/pilot background, Adrienne's passion is aviation safety. After working alongside the talented and skilled controllers at Los Angeles Air Route Traffic Control Center, (shout out to Area Delta!), she relocated to Chicago where she now works as an FAA Aviation Safety Inspector for the Chicago O'Hare office. She also worked as a corporate pilot flying VIPs for several years after working as a Grand Canyon aerial tour pilot. Adrienne was a flight instructor in Florida, helping others get their start in aviation careers. Adrienne also has been involved with Women in Aviation International and the Ninety-Nines since 2002, holding various leadership positions both in Florida and in California. Her passion for STEM outreach and supporting women's advancement in technical fields is part of her DNA. Adrienne holds a bachelor's degree in Aeronautical Science from Embry-Riddle. No matter which side of the radio she is on, Adrienne is thrilled to be part of such a fascinating industry. She currently resides in Chicago with her family where she enjoys urban bicycling and attending live story telling events.