MEET THE HAWFIELDS JAMMERS

Hawfields Jammers is a mountain dulcimer group dedicated to preserving the beautiful tones of this instrument which was created in the backcountry of the Carolinas and Virginia during the Colonial Period. The dulcimer was created by the Scotch Irish who were forced to come to this country after the English invaded their country.

The group plays a mixture of traditional mountain music and the hymns from that period as well as some more modern pieces. Hawfields Jammers is made up of about 20 players from Alamance, Chatham, Durham, Orange, and Randolph Counties. They have been playing as a group for eight years performing concerts in the Piedmont Triad and in the Triangle areas. Hawfields Presbyterian Church serves as the home base for the group where they meet every Wednesday afternoon to rehearse. Dr. Ted Henson serves as the leader of the group.

Today we have an ensemble from this group who be introducing us to the Mountain Dulcimer the only instrument completely native to the United States.

The Episcopal Diocese of North Carolina

4800 Six Forks Rd, Suite 300, Raleigh, NC 27609 | (919) 834-7474

Beloved in Christ:

At Convention in November, we announced an invitation and expectation for the congregations of the Diocese of North Carolina to engage in the work of racial reparations and restitution, beginning with an intentional process of truth-telling and reckoning. This engagement is an essential expression of our commitment to Christ and to his call for justice and love, and thus to the mission, health, and well-being of each congregation.

A committee of folks, from across our diocese and our governing bodies, has been studying and researching reparations and restitution for the past three years. We agree with the committee's conclusion, that to fruitfully engage this work, each congregation must have structured conversations about race that include hard questions and answers about both the past and present. Each must then decide how to respond to what they learn. Only then can we make wise decisions that will help bring about a brighter, better future.

To that end, Lindsey Ardrey and the Reparations and Restitution Committee have prepared a curriculum and accompanying resources to assist our congregations in this exploration and journey.

Because our congregations are in different places and stages in this ongoing effort, and one size will not fit all, the curriculum features three different starting points. One is for congregations just beginning this work, another for churches who have done some historic research and want to take the next step, and a third for congregations who have done the historical work, have wrestled with options in response, and are ready to take action.

The curriculum and resources can be found here:

WWW.EPISDIONC.ORG/REPARATIONS-AND-RESTITUTION

In this season of new beginnings, we invite your congregation to review the curriculum, to pray and discern, and then to commit and engage in this life-giving work. One of Jesus' gospel promises to his followers is that we will know the truth, and the truth will set us free.

Walk with us; pray with us; listen and learn with us how God is calling each congregation of our Diocese to respond to its particular history and our commitment to justice, to truth-telling, to liberation and to life.

May the promise of hope and joy that came to us, in human form, in Jesus, be our guide, our light, our truth.

In God's grace,

The Rt. Rev. Samuel S. Rodman | Bishop

The Rt. Rev. Jennifer Brooke-Davidson | Assistant Bishop
