

Charlie Schoenberger has a rich background in supporting and defending the United States. He began his career as a soldier in the US Army, later serving as a Citizen Soldier with the National Guard. After leaving the military, Charlie became deeply involved in collaborative learning technology, a journey he continues to pursue. He gained valuable expertise during his time at Microsoft Corporation, where he supported US Army's systems in the early days of Windows & Office.

Currently, Charlie holds the role of Senior Director at Adobe Learning, contributing to the Defense & Intelligence sector. Outside of work, he takes pleasure in coaching and mentoring student-athletes at Arundel High School in Maryland.