REFLECTION FROM FR. RALPH

One of my favorite movies is the 1959 motion picture Ben-Hur: A Tale of the Christ. In one of the more important scenes there is an exchange between Judah Ben-Hur, played by Charlton Heston, and Pontius Pilate, played by Frank Thring. In this scene, after knowing great suffering followed by great success, Judah Ben-Hur is called by Pontius Pilate to receive an encouraging message from his adopted father, a Roman Aristocrat and military leader informing him that he is a newly-recognized Roman citizen.

Now, Judah Ben-Hur, as well as his family, still smarting from considerable misfortune under Roman rule as an Israelite, expresses his great dissatisfaction with the current circumstances for himself, his family, and his people. This is a crucial moment for Judah Ben-Hur; either he accepts the privilege of becoming a Roman citizen under the influence of his adoptive father, which would bring with it every possible worldly benefit known at the time, or, he rejects it to return to his previous life and his people. Well, he rejects it, and he is clear about his utter disgust with the Roman Empire. Pontius Pilate then responds with these words: “Where there is greatness, great government or power, even great feeling or compassion, error is also great. We progress and mature by fault. Perfect freedom has no existence. The grown man knows the world he lives in, and for the present, the world is Rome.”

Now, none of this is historically true, but I think you understand. All of us have heard the expression that as disciples of Jesus Christ we are “in the world, but not of the world.” It’s a saying that refers to what Jesus prayed to the Father in the Gospel of John regarding the future of His Church and His disciples: “I gave them your word, and the world hated them, because they do not belong to the world any more than I belong to the world. I do not ask that you take them out of the world but that you keep them from the evil one. They do not belong to the world any more than I belong to the world (Jn 17:14-16).” The meaning here is that, though we live in this world, our life is essentially centered in Jesus Christ, and our ultimate purpose in this life is to make our way to the Kingdom of Heaven.

When we consider the first reading from the Book of the prophet Isaiah, notice how the ancient author is familiar with various geographical locations. Tarshish, though its exact location is unknown, was most likely somewhere along the coast of the Mediterranean Sea and is referred to as a port city of great prosperity and economic activity. Phut, either Libyan or Egyptian, at one time had plentiful amounts of Gold. Lud, most likely west of what we now know as Tel Aviv, Israel, is reported to be, at one time, a place of prominence regarding Jewish trade and scholarship. Mosoch, possibly located in either what we now know as modern-day Turkey or Armenia, provided brass and slaves to the city of Tyre. Finally, Javan, refers to the territory of what we now know as Greece.

Notice how there is uncertainty regarding the exact location of most of these territories and cities (though the prophet knew); but just the same, notice too, that they all at one time enjoyed prosperity and significance in the ancient world; yet, they declined or were conquered by other rival nations. This is the point of the ancient author. They represent power, prosperity, success and renown. We can find the same type of reference in other places in the bible, especially in the psalms. But there is something more significant for our purposes. It is obvious that the prophet is familiar with history, geographical locations, the various cultures of his time and their place in the order of things in regard to salvation history. In short, the ancient author is intelligent, well-informed and well-acquainted with the world in which he lives; but at the same time, he sees the divine purpose of God’s plan in a way that makes it possible for him to understand that he and his people are “in the world, but not of the world.” He is able to read the signs of the times, and not just his own, but those before him, currently immediate to him, and the destiny that laid ahead of him with the ability to see the sacred design and will of God.

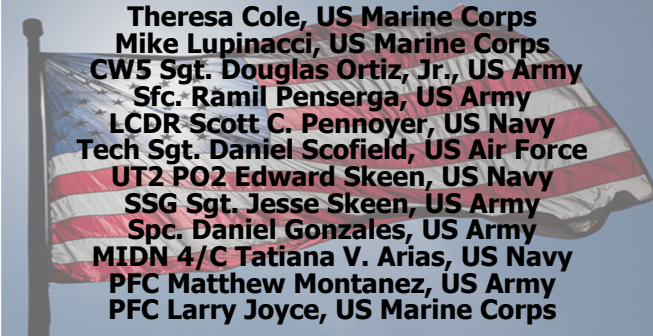

This is exactly the case for us today. The world continues to whirr all around us with influences, enticements, events, and most importantly of all, a shallow short-cited view of who and what we are and of all that we are meant to be according to the will of God. It is true, there are many beautiful and good things we can see and do in this life, and we can certainly make a difference and contribute to our times for the good of others, but that doesn’t mean that we are, at the same time, to compromise or relinquish the will of God, the truth of the Gospel, and more specifically, our way of life, worship and the teachings of the Church so that our identity is more commensurable with or palatable to the world. This is why Jesus said of us: “they do not belong to the world any more than I belong to the world,” and this is why in today’s Gospel He says: “Strive to enter through the narrow door, for many, I tell you, will attempt to enter but will not be strong enough.”

We, all of us, are blessed with the gift of baptism, and consequently, we can enjoy the grace of God and the guidance of the Holy Spirit as we make our journey of faith and discern God’s will in our lives as we strive to live in this world amidst these most confusing and difficult times. If we do, we’ll have the same spiritual insight, the same prophetic vision as did the all the “holy ones” of the Old Testament, as well as the saints and the spiritual masters who have gone before us. We’ll have the ability to see the world in a way that we could not otherwise. Rather than allowing ourselves to be influenced by a “worldly view” of life and reality, turning our heads to the right and to the left (Deut 5:32, 28:14; Prov 4:27), we will avoid the wide road that leads to destruction, and we will, as Jesus tells us “enter through the narrow door,” and at the proper time, at the end of the ages, we “will come from the east and the west and from the north and the south and will recline at table in the kingdom of God (Mt 7:13; Lk 13:24, 29).”

Fr. Ralph
