The Chancery was built in 1941 by Jerry Maiatico and designed by M.G. Lepley. The facade of the predominantly red brick building is broken up only by a central column of fluted light stone. All corner windows are adorned with vertical lines of red and corner windows in the central portion of the building are also highlighted beneath with stone. The entry foyer has been added on and leads into a sleek lobby which has been remodeled at some point as well. Perhaps the stone flooring is original with its starkly contrasting black geometric lines. The stone foundation of this H-shaped building is in beautiful condition.
