

A Look at Art Nouveau & Art Deco:

Parallels and Contrasts

December 7, 2024

When

Saturday, December 7, 2024

3 – 5pm

Where

The Broadmoor Co-Op, Cleveland Park, Washington, DC

About the Program

Join us for a fun and educational afternoon as ADSW member Robert Jenner takes us on an illustrated journey exploring the stylistic differences between Art Nouveau and Art Deco, two adjacent artistic movements that gained prominence in Europe in the early twentieth century.

An added attraction for this in-person talk will be the venue itself: the Art Deco era bar at the Broadmoor Co-Op in Cleveland Park. ADSW President Steve Knight will be on hand to tend bar with sparkling wine and a special cocktail preparation just for the event.

About the Presenter

Robert Jenner received his Ph. D. in History from the University of Maryland, MA from the University of Chicago and BA from American University. His book, FDR's Republicans was published in 2012. He is a professional lecturer and covers subjects ranging from civilizations, commodities, biographies, literature, and architecture.

Mr. Jenner's experience includes college teaching, documentary film work, advertising, and television production. He aspires to bring history to the general public in ways that are insightful and amusing.

Event Access

The Broadmoor is located at 3601 Connecticut Avenue, NW, just one block from the Cleveland Park Metro. There is limited on-street parking available, so those arriving by car are encouraged to carpool or use cabs or rideshare.
