

Lynnette Grey Bull – A Brief Biography

“My name is Lynnette Grey Bull and my home is the Wind River Indian Reservation in the heart of Wyoming. I am a full-blooded Native American woman, a Northern Arapaho and Hunkpapa Lakota. My family knows something about Wyoming. Our ancestors hunted mammoths here thousands of years before the founding of the Equality State.”

She is the director of a non-profit “Not Our Native Daughters.” Grey Bull also has over ten years of experience in community relations volunteerism and working in the finance industry. “I stand before you today, a full-blooded Native American woman, a Northern Arapaho/Hunkpapa Lakota,” Grey Bull says on her campaign website. “The statistics that hang over my head are these: I am among the most stalked, raped, murdered, sexually assaulted, and abused of any women in any ethnic group ...
