BRIDGES

If you do any travelling at all, you will eventually go over a bridge. One of the scariest ones I ever went over was the original sunshine skyway bridge between Bradenton, FL and St. Petersburg, FL. It was not cement. It looked like mesh and it was very high. I prayed a lot the first time I went over it and did not want to do it again.

Another bridge is the bridge between upper and lower Michigan called the Mackinac bridge. This bridge moves with the wind. My family crossed this bridge on a short vacation to Mackinac Island. It also was quite unnerving as we travelled over it. It is a long bridge, and of course we had to travel it twice.

Bridges connect things. Whether it is one island to another, or city to city, it is made to connect. Years ago, the Lord showed me that the cross he was crucified on is a bridge. It connects the sinner to God. This bridge brings fear to some because they have never crossed it. Like the ones I mentioned earlier, they may bring doubt that this bridge is safe. Yet, without this bridge there is no hope to the destination of heaven.

Choose your bridges carefully. The most secure one is supported by Jesus. He became that bridge, and he holds all things together.
