Malmöhus Castle is Sweden's oldest renaissance castle, and one of the city's most famous attractions. Originally built as a minor citadel in 1436, it was destroyed in the Skåne uprising a century later. The castle was rebuilt in the design we see today after the rebellion finished. The castle's lively history is tied to wars between the Danes and Swedes, and it was destroyed and rebuilt several times. After a fire in 1870, only the main building and two gun towers remained, and were restored in 1930. Nowadays, the castle hosts the Museum of Art, Natural History Museum and the famous Tropicarium aquarium.

Foteviken Museum is a living history museum or open air museum is no traditional museum as one is normally perceived. Instead you will find an entire late Viking Age town reconstructed using the materials and techniques of the time, as historically correct as you can get based on the archaeological and historical source materials that are available. The town is made up of real Viking houses and inhabited by volunteers with an interest in making the Viking Age come alive and for the town to be experienced as it might have been a thousand years ago (The town's population is made up of members of the Scandinavian Viking Explorer Group's village community).

Visby Cathedral was built as a church for German traders at the end of the 12th century, and finished around 1190 and then rebuilt in 1211. Originally the church was only used by visiting Germans, but as some of them settled permanently in Visby, it became a church for both resident, German traders, and eventually native Gotlanders. It was consecrated in 1225 by the Bishop of Linköping, and declared a church for two congregations, each with their own priest, one for visitors, and one for natives. Today it is the only medieval church of Visby still in use. Twelve other churches in town are preserved as ruins. After the Reformation in 1572, Gotland was made its own Diocese, and the church designated a cathedral.

The Vasa Museum is one of Scandinavia's most visited museums. It is here that you will find in all its glory, the unique and well-preserved warship Vasa from 1628, embellished with hundreds of wooden sculptures. The Vasa Museum collections include the more than 40 000 objects that were found in and around the ship. The objects and ship give a unique picture of everyday life at sea and on land, and of shipbuilding techniques and nautical warfare in the early 1600s. Objects not on display are stored in one of our two museum stores. You can search The Vasa Museum collections on Digitalt Museum below.
