Sarah Kay Bierle is managing editor for Emerging Civil War. She has a B.A. in History from Thomas Edison State University and is currently working in the American Battlefield Trust's Education Department. Much of Sarah's research focuses on real people and their trials and successes of everyday life in challenging eras, with a primary focus on the Civil War. Her current studies include Confederate artillery officers, the Union II Corps, and civilian/military interactions. She has published several historical novels and a non-fiction book on the Battle of New Market for the Emerging Civil War Series.
