JoAnna M. McDonald, Ph.D., is a historian, writer, and public speaker. She grew up a stone's throw from the U.S. Army War College in Carlisle, Pennsylvania and was blessed with two mentors associated with this institution who have been influential in all her publications. She earned her Master's in History at Shippensburg University and Ph.D. in History, with a focus in strategic studies and strategic leadership, from Morgan State University, Baltimore, Maryland. She has worked for Federal and State governments, as well as defense and television industries. Author of eleven books on the Civil War and WWII, as well as numerous journal and newsletter articles regarding U.S. Marine Corps history, JoAnna's next book is R. E. Lee's Grand Strategy & Strategic Leadership: Caught in a Paradoxical Paradigm.
