Title: Power to the People?

Power is described as ability, strength, vigor, or might. No matter the dialect spoken this is how mankind defines power. From the halls of government, military, academia, industry and technology, power is defined by the controls, mastery, ability, or the right to command the nations. Use of authority to define what is legal and the right to authorize the definitions of existence. Here is where everything gets muddy. Below are three questions to ask yourself concerning the governments of mankind.

1. Power! Which government gave you life?
2. Authority! Who carries the authority to define existence on the earth?
3. Who is the author of our existence?

Psalm 2:1

Why are the nations confused and disorderly, and the people complain about the emptiness. The kings of the earth stand and counsel together, against the Lord and his anointed. Rooting out the instruction of his anointing and cutting off any connection with the mind of the Father.

When we look through the lens of history there are many different authors defined by the stories of creation in different cultures. In the past few centuries, mankind has worked to find authorship outside of the normal construct of creation. Leaving open the possibility of being the author of existence as it pertains to being. Once this authority is established, then the right to existence will be determined by this new definition of being.

The old battle over power defined by whose god is greater is vanishing into mythology, with but a few extremists left to extinguish. Babylon is fallen!
