Exemption Update

We have learned that employers and schools have been denying Medical Exemptions for vaccinations.

“How are they getting away with this???”

Employers and schools have been denying medical exemptions by saying that the only medical exemptions they will accept are those in accordance with what the CDC states is a medical exemption to a covid vaccine. The CDC says that the only people who should be medically exempt from a covid vaccine are those who have had:

- Severe allergic reaction (e.g., anaphylaxis) after a previous dose or to a component of the COVID-19 vaccine within 4 hours following administration
- Immediate allergic reaction of any severity to a previous dose or known (diagnosed) allergy to a component of the vaccine within 4 hours following administration

There is still hope.

Through comments from legal professionals, it has come to our attention that people should rather be seeking Religious Exemptions which have more legal backing. It will be more difficult and costly for the employers and schools to deny Religious Exemptions when countered with legal action.

More good news about the Religious Exemptions - They are FREE and you don't have to wait for a consultation with a doctor.

There are only two requirements for a religious belief to be protected by law: the belief must be religious in nature and it must be sincerely held.

Legal Backing

US Constitution

Religious exemptions are legally backed by the US Constitution's First Amendment

First Amendment of the United States Constitution and 42 U.S. Code § 2000a - Prohibition against discrimination or segregation in places of public accommodation, which states "All persons shall be entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, and accommodations of any place of public accommodation, as defined in this section, without discrimination or segregation on the ground of race, color, religion, or national origin." Failure to uphold 42 U.S. Code § 2000a may be met with legal action.

US EEOC

Religious exemptions are legally backed by the US Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Additionally, per the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) which enforces Federal laws prohibiting employment discrimination, employers MUST offer religious and disability accommodations to vaccine requirements.

If the employer or university states they will not accept the religious exemption due to your previous vaccinations, inform them that due to recently gained knowledge, you have discovered that all currently available covid vaccines contain aborted human fetal DNA fragments. Having done even more research, you now realize that a multitude of previous vaccines also contained aborted fetal DNA fragments and would have never consented to those knowing what you know now.

5. An affidavit may be necessary in the case where your Religious Exemption is denied. If your religious exemption is denied, you may want to have a lawyer follow up on your behalf that is well versed in medical freedom advocacy.
One resource is Kevin@mermigislaw.com - Offering a combination of helping write your religious exemption only or a combined service of following up with a letter from their law firm.

It is imperative to contact your state representatives and keep them informed of what is happening at your job and school. Make them aware of the abuse of power these employers and schools are making over your medical choices by trying to force an experimental procedure on you. The Nuremberg Code was created specifically for times like this.
