The home auditor is under no obligation to use any specific equipment, nor to search for any specific target or remedy a specific situation. Although most energy savings can be defined through mathematical equations, the savings proposed in your report may or may not be reflected in your energy bill due to a number of factors including but not limited to such things as use times, new, modified or unmaintained equipment introduced to the power source. Accordingly, the auditor and company make no representations or warranties of energy savings.

The home auditor's examination of the home will be mostly visual and will not involve any invasive activities. Additionally, the auditor will not perform the proposed changes. It is up to the Homeowner to hire and work with a contractor participating in the local utility rebate program to make the changes and ensure you receive any rebates from your local utility companies.
