

Jet Black Breeding Herd

We have been selectively breeding jet black alpacas for 13 years, with a focus on great fleece for processing. We chose jet black alpacas for many reasons and have never regretted our choice:

1. They look great in the paddock, in full fleece and when freshly shorn.
2. They are the only animal that gives a true black fleece.
3. Jet black alpaca does not bleach or fade in the sun; this means that garments made with natural jet black alpaca will also not fade.
4. There is an increasing trend for more environmental, undyed fabrics and black is a constant in fashion.

Our mating choices have been made with the following characteristics in mind: Jet black colouring, low SD with a non-hairy blanket and good length, maintaining low micron fleece for many years, soft handling fleece. As we are based in the relatively humid Auckland area, we have not aimed at high density in fleeces as this tends to increase skin problems.

Certified Stud Males

Sierra Vista Black Jack: DOB: 31/3/2008 IAR Entry Price Code: JB3

Jet Black, just starting to grey at 11 years. Very soft handle, not at all hairy. Selected due to his fine and soft handling fleece at 8 years old and the fleece has stayed fine. Very pleased with his progeny. Fleece Stats:

Canchones Tycoon: DOB: 09/04/2007 IAR Entry Price Code: JB1

Jet Black, has only greyed in the blanket in the last 2 years. Had great conformation, posture, density, style and crimp. He has been the foundation of our improvements. During the last year, he has had something wrong in the gut that the vet has not been able to sort. However, he does now seem to be improving again. He is still the alpha male. Fleece Stats:

Jet Black Breeding Herd

Cuesta Karita: DOB: 15/05/2015 IAR Entry Price Code: JB1

Karita has had a problem with her left eye which has left her partially sighted, so she needs careful handling as she can get worried in the yards (she's fine in the paddocks). Bay black with a dense fleece. Fleece Stats:
