You may feel more comfortable leaving your child if you plan an opportunity to observe staff interactions with your child. You may choose to arrange a meet and greet or trial run in which you're present while staff cares for your child.

Is Caring Voices right for my?
Family?

Ask yourself the following questions. If your answer is "yes" to several of these questions, Caring Voices is right for your family.

Is finding temporary care for your child a problem?

Is it important that you and your spouse/partner enjoy an evening alone or with friends, without the responsibility of caring for your child with special needs?

Do you need time to relax and refresh so that you will be better able to meet the needs of your child?

If you had appropriate care for your child with special needs, would you use the time for a special activity with your other children?

Does your child require a caregiver who has specific experience and/or special training to meet his or her care needs?
