

You can give an hour or work full time for the next two months; you can call, text, write postcards or letters, or drop off literature on door knobs. There are plenty of ways to help, for as long or as little as you can. Here are only a few:

SIERRA CLUB

Sierra Club: The Sierra Club is running several campaigns related to this election. If you want to help get environmentally minded candidates, click here for more info.

<https://www.sierraclubindependentaction.org/2020-plan-to-win>

An easy place to start: <https://www.sierraclubindependentaction.org/writing-climate-voters-letters>

Environmental Voter Project: Did you know that as many as 15 million people who care about the environment DON'T VOTE??? This startling statistic is the driving force of the Environmental Voter Project. Their goal is simply to get more people who care about the environment to vote.

They are using a variety of tactics, all coronavirus-safe. To find out more and maybe get involved, check it out at <https://www.environmentalvoter.org/>

UU the Vote: The Unitarian Universalist Social Justice team is helping coordinate various efforts. You'll find that some of their events do focus on organizing, but there are a number of chances to get right in there and do the work.

To learn more, go to <https://www.uuthevote.org/> and then scroll down to Find An Event Near You (they are all 'near' you, they're all virtual!)

MUUSJN is collaborating with various faith-based organizations on a Get Out the Vote project. We are calling low-propensity voters, in a non-partisan way, and encouraging them to vote. To join in this effort, get your name on the email list by sending your contact information to Sharon Pederson (East Liberty UU) at sspederson@sbcglobal.net