My aim is to inspire youth to dream big and excel in handling big initiatives that have a strong impact. I'm thrilled to be a member of PM Ready and excited to put into practice what I have learned from everyone.

“I graduated from Spelman College, where I pursued my Bachelor’s in International Studies with a focus on East Asia. I am currently a graduate student at George Washington University’s Elliott School of International Affairs, working to obtain my Master’s in Asian Studies. I have a particular interest in Crisis Management and Humanitarian aid. My goal at PM Ready is to inspire youth to contribute to any projects that make meaningful social impact on our world.”

“I have a master's degree in international management with a specialty in project management. I have worked as a Project Manager for international humanitarian organizations. I look forward to working with the PM Ready team to equip youth with resources and tools in project management. As a young adult with an entrepreneurial mindset, my goal is to inspire youth to achieve their goals and, more importantly, believe in themselves.
On September 28, Gerald Leonard delivered a virtual talk on his third book A Symphony of Choices.

Gerald Leonard

A Symphony of Choices is one of the few books that traces how a first-time project manager survives and excels at work while meeting challenges in his personal life during the first year of his new role. It provides a unique opportunity for student musicians to learn an orchestra's "behind-the-scenes" business operation. Learning that an orchestra manager must overcome many challenges to ensure a successful and pleasant concert season for the audience and other key orchestra stakeholders is eye-opening. The conversational style makes the book an ideal case study of how mentorship can help first-time leaders meet or exceed goals.
