Virtual Teambuilding

Gallup (2022) recently presented that the single biggest factor in an employee's engagement and productivity was whether or not they had a close friend at work. Unfortunately, today's workplace has gone from a shared office building to a collection of virtual offices around the globe. It's harder than ever for people to find that work bestie that they so desperately need.

Companies and leaders had to make many pivots during the COVID-19 pandemic. One of the hardest hurdles that remains a challenge was figuring out how to build strong virtual teams. Research and surveys agree: while many employees love working from home, managers typically cite that it makes their job more difficult.

How do you foster a strong sense of team when you rarely, or even never, see each other in person? When everyone is Zoomed out or zoned out, how can you create real connections? Is it even possible? Spoiler: YES!
