Missing persons' investigations are dealt with on a strictly confidential basis. The depth of service and cost will reflect individual requirements, which depends on the situation and possible location of the subject. We assure confidentiality at all times; the subject remains unaware of our enquiries, which are routinely conducted with absolute sensitivity and discretion.

Many agencies trace investigations merely consist of an online search. At Agent-X SHATU-X this is only a starting point. We can where necessary deploy agents to make local enquiries, knock on doors, contact relatives, friends or employers. Each case is dealt with after a full consultation with the clients, and the enquiries made will be tailored to the level of discretion required.

As with all investigations, Agent-X SHATU-X ensures we keep clients up to date with progress of their case and consult them on any crucial decision.

The cost of finding people, essentially depends on the information that is available about the person's circumstances and therefore the complexity of the investigation and searches required to locate a person. Part of our service is to ensure we find the most linear, straightforward approach to finding a person. This is accomplished by asking the right questions before starting enquiries.

Having up to date background facts reduces the cost of investigation in comparison to the more intricate requirements for locating people whose full identity is unknown, tracing birth parents or tracing people internationally.

When we have tracked down the missing person, we will provide you with their contact details. If you want, we can make contact with the person on your behalf and arrange to set up a meeting. In certain circumstances you may wish us to carry out a situation report, so that you know a little about the person before contact is made. This is usually most helpful when tracing distant relatives or people you have not seen for some time, or never met.

Locating a missing person is often an intricate or delicate operation requiring sensitivity, tact, and professional understanding. Agent-X SHATU-X's reputation relies on us creating a considerate and supportive environment and carrying out our services with discretion and professionalism at all times.
