

Daisy's Emotions

In the cool October breeze, Daisy laid on a pile of leaves thinking about her real parents. She loved her mom dearly, but her parents had problems and they divorced. Daisy's mom lost custody of her during the divorce. Her dad left Daisy with her aunt and uncle.

Daisy was abandoned and lived with her aunt and uncle. Her aunt and uncle were kind and loved her, but she could not feel the same way they did. Daisy was emotionless and she could not express her feelings for them or anyone. It was the same at school. Daisy felt invisible at school. Nobody liked her or talked to her. Daisy did not feel sad, mad, or happy. She felt nothing.

One morning in November, she walked to the park where she read underneath a tree. Daisy saw a rather simple dress on the floor. For some reason, the dress sparked an interest in Daisy, so she picked it up, and took it home to try it on. Daisy ran to her room, put the white dress on and suddenly the dress turned yellow. She did not know what it meant but she kept it on.

The next day, Daisy put the dress on, and the dress turned purple. She still did not know what it meant but she walked to school. In the hallway, a student noticed that her dress was purple, then suddenly turned yellow then blue. Soon a group of students gathered all around Daisy. They were in awe since they had never seen a dress like that before. They started asking Daisy all kinds of questions. One classmate noticed that the dress was changing colors based on how Daisy felt. Everyone talked to her for the first time. Daisy's dress turned yellow so must be feeling happy but then it turned grayish. At lunch time, she started to get overwhelmed because people kept surrounding her and talking to her every second. This was all so new to her. Daisy was excited to go to the park after school and read. She felt weird by everyone talking to her and having feelings.

After a few days of her new popularity, Daisy felt that she would prefer to be alone instead of people talking to her. Now she understood why people were talking to her; it was her dress. Daisy examined the dress more carefully and noticed that the tag inside the dress had something written on it. It said that the dress and it told her that the dress would grant the person wearing it one wish and as soon as the wish was made, the person would be emotionless.

The only thing Daisy wanted was to reunite with her mom and she did not care about being popular. She wanted her life back with her mom and to be happy. Daisy thought of using her wish to find her mother and her sister Agnes. This was her only chance to have her family back. Daisy wanted to use the wish but if she used it, she would be emotionless. She pondered that for a couple of days. Her only dream was to be with her mother and sister.

Daisy wanted to use the wish to be reunited with her family. Daisy remembered that her mother always wanted to go to Florida, but it was too far. Daisy started crying. That was the first time that Daisy ever felt true sadness and the only time that she cried. Daisy said, "I wish to see my mother and my sister." Suddenly, Daisy's mother and sister walked into the house. She was so excited to see her mother and her sister. But she was sad to not have her dress.

Daisy felt sad and happy, which meant that she is not emotionless. Daisy was happier than she ever had been living with her mother and sister.