

If your imagination was real

Have you ever thought of your imagination in real life? If you saw things you liked or things you imagined that weren't true? There could be bird spiders or elephant monkeys, you name it. But could it really happen? Today Timmy saw a Monkey with its tail on its head. Could it be true? He said at lunch Timmy saw his friend as a statue and then he saw his other friend as a rhino. At the end of school Timmy ran to his mother and he explained everything. His mother shrugged and said maybe it was your imagination! The next day Timmy was really scared, and he shrieked when he saw a 5 legend deer with a beaver head on. But the other students were very confused. At first recess Timmy's friend came and said: Timmy thank goodness you're ok! "I guess "muttered Timmy. I think it was my Imagination.

Speaking of Imaginations, I want to share a memory of some who I loved: When Covid started we were all scared and my grandma and family were always there for us. I loved to draw and write, and my grandma would encourage me to do it. I got better and better and I know how to draw. But she got covid and was very sick. I was worried and sad. Unfortunately, she did not make it. All my family was sad, and heart broken. I knew she was always there for me, and I knew her my whole life. This is why I wrote this: she always tells us to use our Imagination. Or was it my Imagination? No, it's a true story of what really happened to my grandma. I hope you like my short story!
