This is the third art quilt in an ongoing series exploring the use of bias tape and freeform design. As the piece was being hand appliquéd with handmade bias tape, I thought I saw a basket. As it progressed, it needed something else, so the zigzag element was added at the top and the black rock was added. Now it looks more like a version of an ark to some viewers, a cave to others and still others see the basket. The piece is heavily hand stitched to add visual texture.
