The creative process in doing commission pieces for the Family Name genre of artwork is more of a thoughtful, personal time. I enjoy the initial interview with the client. This interview is where I find the inspiration for the piece. It is based on the individual family members, their careers, hobbies, travels, and other bits of information.

The only aspect that flows from commission to commission is the center medallion area where the letter from the last name is used as the focal point. Fabric is selected from my vast inventory and the design flows outward from that point.
