

In almost two years I hope to major in Psychology and be able to seek for higher education. I work hard for my future even when people tell me I am not capable of doing better. It's not true I know I can make myself proud and push myself to do better. Even though I get comments like those I still try to be there for others and help because that's one of the purposes I am meant to have.