

Special Movie Night at Allhallows – showing the Queen’s Coronation

Many people in 1953 would have seen the Queens Coronation on a small box TV or at their local cinema. At Allhallows, we wanted to re-create that experience of the day.

Entry was free and affordable movie snacks and drinks (including ice cream) was made available for people to purchase at the interval.

Everyone took their seats, and the movie began. “I personally would have never sat and watched it at home so it was wonderful to watch history unfolding”.

“In the past I have seen clips here and there, mostly the ones of her being presented with her crown and sceptre or parading the streets in her carriage, but watching the whole event brought it to life. You could really experience the majestic feel and splendour of this very special British Occasion”.
