This amount will provide critical funding stability as we broaden our programming this year and next in support of low income women in Holyoke. Women with additional education and a college degree will be critically important to rebuilding Holyoke post-Covid. Indeed, increasing the earning potential of low income women and enabling them to successfully raise healthy children is perhaps the single most consequential activity in which a social program can engage, both in terms of bolstering individual well-being and preventing downstream costs to society. Obtaining a college degree is linked to lower rates of child neglect; reduced health and mental health care costs; reduced costs of out-of-home care services (foster care, juvenile justice); reduced costs of child welfare services; improved academic achievement; sustainable, living wage employment; and improved earnings of children in adulthood.	The timeline for this activity would start in September 2021 (estimated award date) and continue for 24 months (two years) through August 2023.
