Planned Unit Development Project Narrative

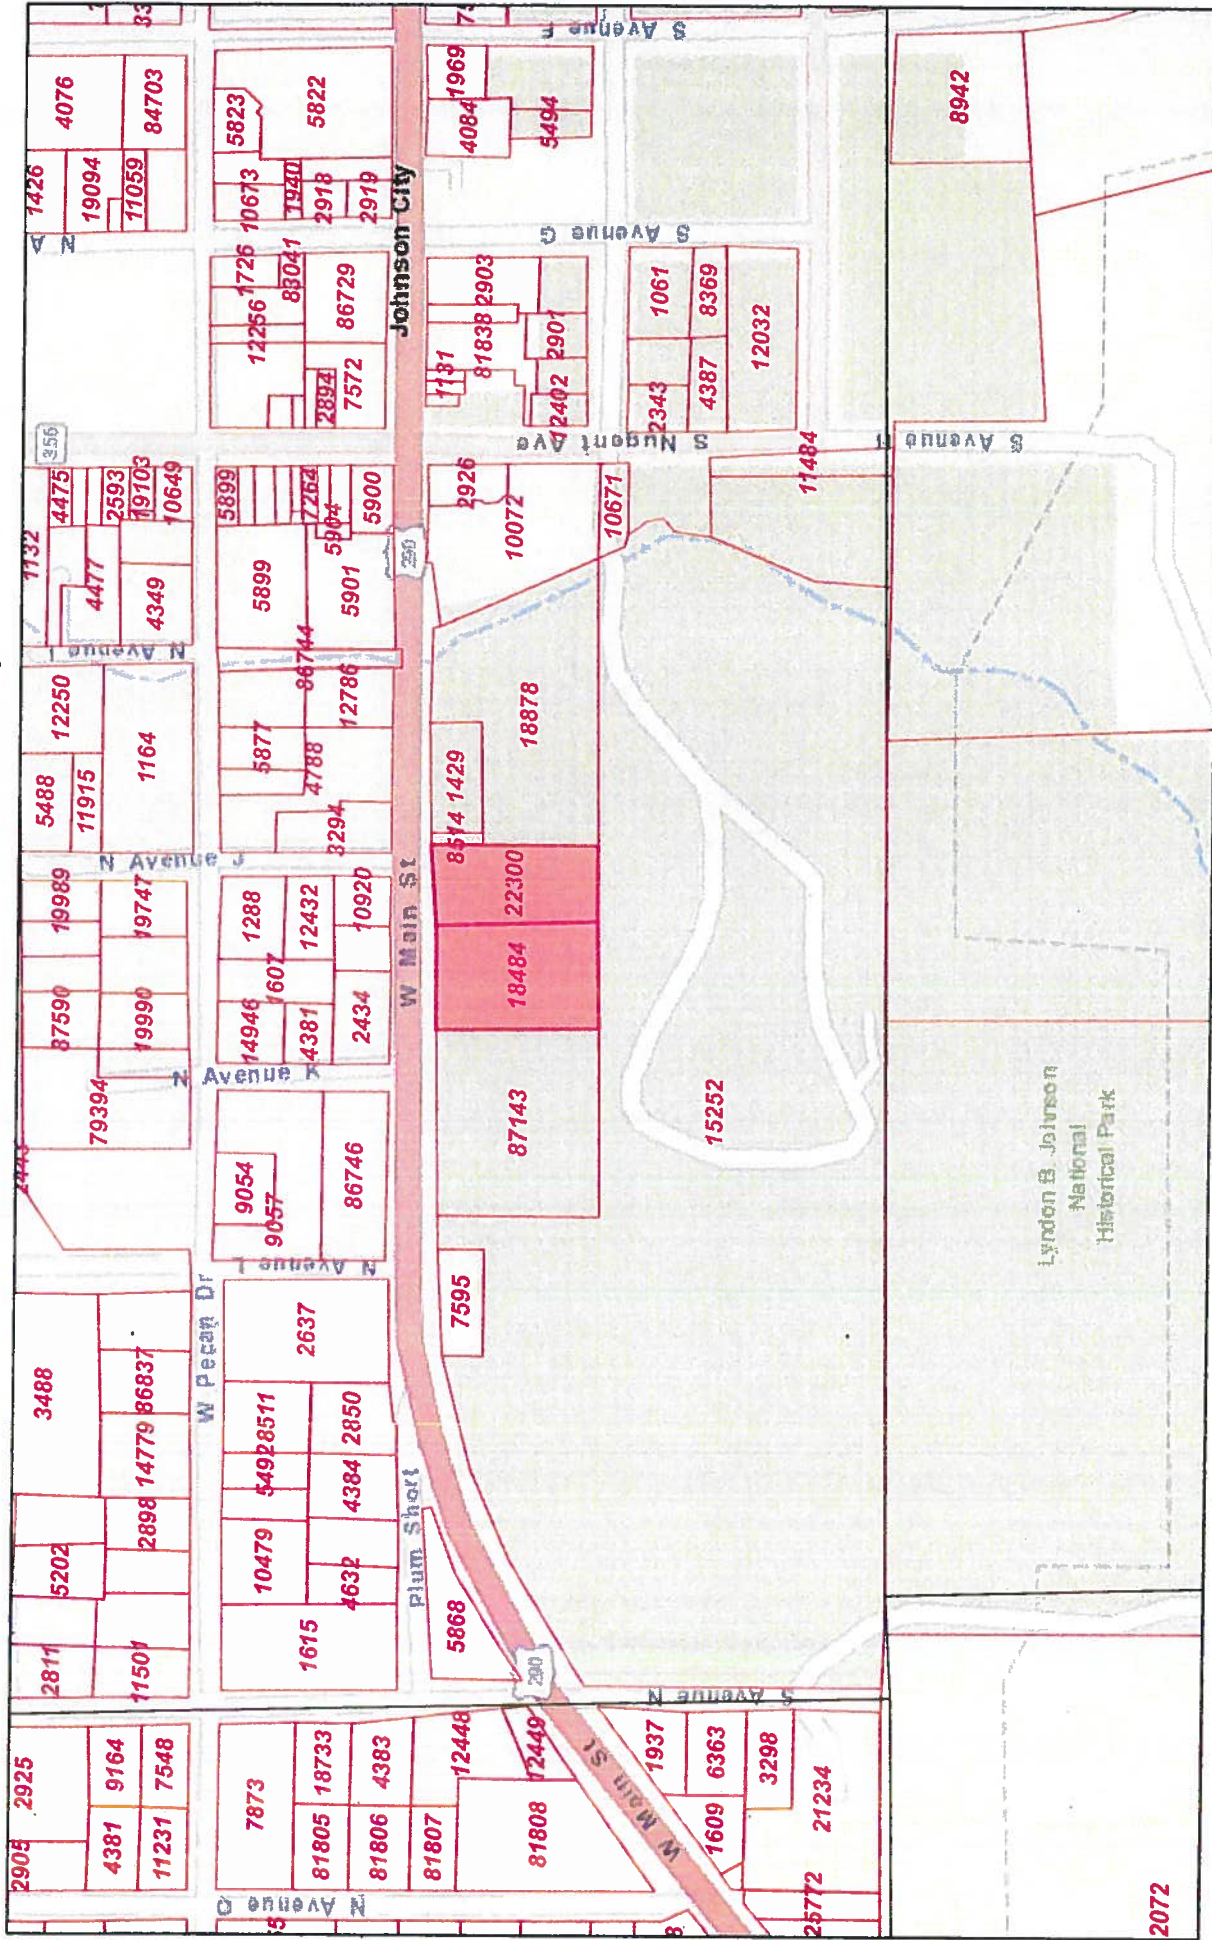

This Planned Unit Development (PUD) application is submitted by Zac Zamora, Founder of Variance Design, and owner of the property. Variance Design has developed a master plan for the property that envisions a series of ancillary uses to the existing workshop and greenhouse to address the ongoing business needs of the company. Variance Design has recently completed a greenhouse to enhance their business, and the proposed facility is envisioned as a flexible showroom for both interior and exterior plant-scape solutions. Variance may need in the future to remodel the existing arched workshop to expand production space, displacing showroom and office space in the existing building, thus requiring additional space for these activities. Given the unique custom solutions of Variance Design and their national client base, there is also a need to demonstrate unique "living wall" solutions and interact with consultants and project partners periodically to collaborate on unique custom projects. These collaborations often take the form of "design charrettes" to develop unique solutions. The proposed showroom project immerses clients and project partners in an integrated indoor/outdoor environment and is intended to provide Variance Design with the flexibility to address their client's need.

While the existing site zoning of the property seems to allow for ancillary business needs, Johnson City representatives felt that the unique nature of Variance Design did not fit neatly into the published schedule of allowable uses and suggested that a PUD would be advisable. Features of the proposed project include the following attributes:

1. The combination of ancillary business uses does not fit neatly into the listed allowable uses of the existing Highway Commercial Zoning District. The proposed uses include indoor and outdoor product showroom, office and meeting space, and potential visiting artist and client/collaborator accommodations. The design also provides flexibility for periodic uses associated with the existing greenhouse and production facility.

2. The proposed facility is set back from the highway and together with the Workshop and Greenhouse defines the outdoor garden space on the property. This layout preserves the natural features of the flat site, contributes to the community image, and integrates the indoor/outdoor vision of Variance Design.
3. The proposed project carefully preserves the gridded pattern of pecan trees on the existing site and envisions preserved green space on the site. The total percentage of green areas on the site exceeds minimum requirements.
4. The proposed site plan retains parking areas on the western portion of the site to provide for special events, and circulation access around the property perimeter enhances safety and fire access by connecting parking areas on the eastern and western edges of the site. No new access points to the Highway are proposed.
5. The proposed one-story project harmonizes with the spacing of existing buildings to create a cohesive series of unique building elements. Setbacks do not exceed existing zoning requirements.
6. The proposed project envisions sustainability features as part of the overall master plan, consistent with the overall Variance Design philosophy of "living with nature". These features include potential solar panels on covered patios and potential rainwater capture of hard-surface roof areas.
