Making Good Return: Biblical Wisdom on Honoring Aging Parents

Kathleen B. Nielson

Caring for our aging parents—whether we take them into our homes or support them from a distance—is a beautiful opportunity for us to honor them. It can also be an intensely demanding process in which we discover things about them, about ourselves, and about the difficulties of old age that stretch and challenge us.

Addressing the endeavor with grace and clarity, Kathleen Nielson offers five rich scriptural truths to guide our thinking: God sovereignly ordains our aging, calls us to honor our elders, sees the sufferings of age, helps us to the end, and reveals what is to come. Learn how, in light of these truths, we are empowered to respond to our parents and other loved ones with humility, respect, compassion, faith, and hope.

Blessings of the Faith Series

Written for the church, the Blessings of the Faith series introduces and celebrates Reformed doctrine and practice—each book features a brief and practical overview of its topic with discussion questions and an extensive Q&A section.

—David Gibson,
*Minister, Trinity Church,
Aberdeen, Scotland*

Church Membership

Jonathan Landry Cruse

We’re all looking for somewhere to belong—but we won’t find true belonging anywhere in this world outside God’s church. Reformed traditions emphasize church membership because it provides practical, spiritual blessings for our flourishing, yet the extent of those blessings isn’t always evident to us. Here Pastor Jonathan Landry Cruse explains the nature, necessity, benefits, and responsibilities of biblical church membership to revolutionize your understanding of this gift.

Two Cities, Two Loves: Christian Responsibility in a Crumbling Culture

James Montgomery Boice

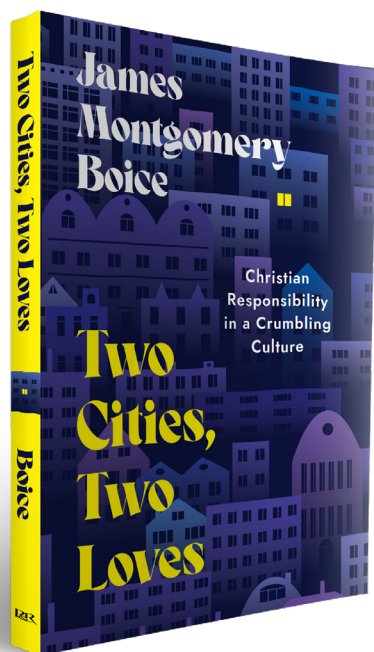

Christians belong to God's kingdom but live in earthly realms that celebrate radically different loves and priorities. A gifted preacher and respected expositor of God's Word, James Montgomery Boice highlights the dangers we face—dangers familiar to God's people throughout the millennia—while offering practical, biblical wisdom and comfort for our sojourn.

This is a revised and updated edition of James Boice's 1996 work by the same title.

“Grounded in solid biblical exposition and informed by Augustine's classic City of God, James Boice provides a transforming vision. We've never needed it more.”
