

ELAR: Trina Moody tmooddy@LPSFrisco.com

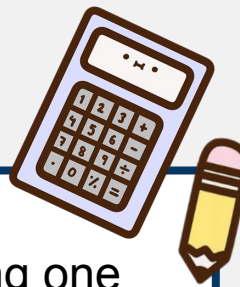

Next week, we will jump "momentarily" into the World of MAP Testing (Reading). Once that has concluded, we will move into the world of fiction and literary nonfiction analysis.

Math: Kiarra Woodard kwoodard@LPSFrisco.com

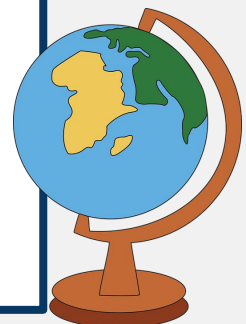

7th Adv: Students will continue to practice solving one variable equation and inequalities to prepare for an assessment.

7th math: Students will continue to learn about number and operations to prepare for an assessment. Students will begin learning about Unit 2: One Variable and inequalities.

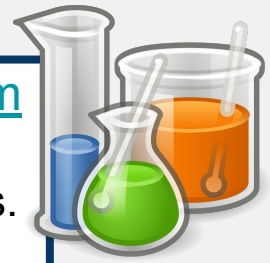

Texas History: Joe Yankovich jyankovich@LPSFrisco.com

We will be exploring the Major Regions of Texas and describing the characteristics of each region and the impact on development of Texas. We also begin our journey exploring the Native American Indian groups of Texas and how geography affected the lifestyle of each unique culture.

Science: Jody McDonald jmcdonald1@LPSFrisco.com

Students will use scientific investigations to compare and contrast elements and compounds as atoms and molecules. Students will also use the Periodic Table to identify the amount and type of atoms within a chemical formula.

Electives

PE: Shane Sharkey ssharkey@LPSFrisco.com

& Alex Percival apercival@LPSFrisco.com

Over the next two weeks in PE, we will continue to develop our volleyball skills and honing strategy as we begin to play full games! We will also be working on fitness and displaying good sportsmanship during team sports.

Theatre: Brianna Lewallen blewallen@LPSFrisco.com

Students will continue to research the different aspects of Greek Theatre, while also working as a class to build ensemble relationships as a group. We will look into different types of auditions, and specifically work on Cold reads in class by having the students read and act out scenes from different plays.

AACTC: Raymond Jaksa rjaksa@LPSFrisco.com

Students will create a multimedia presentation comparing historical visual arts technology with current technology, highlighting the evolution and cultural context. They will also include examples of artwork from different cultures to illustrate their understanding.

Fundamentals of Computer Science: Raymond Jaksa rjaksa@LPSFrisco.com

Students will create a technical document explaining a fundamental computer science concept (e.g., algorithms, data structures, or programming basics) to a non-technical audience. They will then present this document orally to the class, demonstrating written and verbal communication skills. The assessment will be graded using a rubric that evaluates technical accuracy, clarity of explanation, use of appropriate terminology, and effective verbal and non-verbal communication during the presentation.

Principals of Human Services: Lakisha Forbes lforbes@LPSFrisco.com

In Principles of Human Services, we'll discover the key personal qualities important in the workplace, like integrity, positive work ethics, and more. We will also explore the significance of teamwork and personal presentation on the job.
