This project will construct Edge of Field practices in Story County, consisting of (4) saturated buffers and (5) bioreactors that will treat (20) existing agricultural tile outlets. A saturated buffer is an area of perennial vegetation between agricultural fields and waterways where tile outlets drain. Tile lines connect to a control structure, which distributes water laterally along the buffer. As water drains into the buffer, the living roots of perennial vegetation absorb water and nutrients, like nitrogen. Drainage tiles outlet into the woodchips where bacteria convert nitrogen in tile water into nitrogen gas.
