WATERFRONT VIEW 2022: THE FINEST WATERFRONT PROPERTIES FROM AROUND THE WORLD

Welcome to the 16th edition of Waterfront View, Knight Frank's annual publication dedicated to showcasing the very finest waterfront properties across the UK and the rest of the world.

This year, I write my letter with a sense of pride as much as I do relief, as our situation changes. The pandemic's legacy will be lasting, and for many of us, the seismic shift of the past two years has impacted lives in ways unforeseen.

However, some have also been able to change their lives immeasurably for the better. From my perspective, I'm grateful we can help people make these changes by seizing on their dream to live on the water's edge. We also know how much harder it is becoming to do this. Globally, demand for waterfront property outstrips supply. Understanding how, where and when to buy that dream home is becoming more complicated. But we hope the insight and inspiration contained within the pages of this magazine will help you do this. From our expert commentary on the UK and international property market, to a selection of all property types on our coasts and riversides, we believe we can help you find that perfect property.

Please do read the other articles, too, which delve into why the UK has it all in terms of waterfront lifestyles – a personal favourite is the feature on Clinton Devon Estates' effort to preserve and reinvigorate hectares of heathland and wetlands, to benefit the natural environment.

As ever, do get in touch if you wish to find out how we may help you. I believe the knowledge and skillset my team has built in this niche market puts us in a better position to do so than any other agent, and it's earned us the trust and loyalty of many clients over 16 years. We would also like to thank those who are familiar with Knight Frank for placing their trust in us – without you we couldn't move forward as leaders in our market.

I wish you well, and a fantastic second half of your year.

WATERFRONT VIEW MARKET OVERVIEW 2022

The waterfront property market continues to attract a wave of new buyers and their spending power is at a 10-year high

BY CHRIS DRUCE

Senior Research Analyst, Residential Research

Waterfront property has remained at the forefront of the search for greenery, space, and a pandemic-inspired change in lifestyle over the last 12 months, with demand continuing to outstrip supply.

Despite the end of the stamp duty holiday last September, UK waterfront exchanges were up 8% in the 12 months to May versus the five-year average.

Demand has remained resilient too, with viewings of UK waterfront property up 11% in the same period and offers accepted up 9%.

The new buyers coming into the UK waterfront market are looking to spend big too to secure the right property, with the potential spend of new prospective buyers at a decade-long high of £1.7bn in the 12 months to May. The figure was up 13% on the £1.5bn registered in the 12 months to May 2021.

However, sustained demand and tight supply means the amount of waterfront property for sale has fallen over the course of the pandemic outside of London. Supply outside of the capital is down 22% in the 12 months to May 2022 versus the 12 months to May 2020.

This imbalance between supply and demand has continued to keep upwards pressure on prices, with annual average growth of 9.8% in the 12 months to June for UK waterfront properties. The desirability of a waterside setting to buyers means a property next to water commanded, on average, 50% more than an equivalent non-waterfront home in the second quarter of this year.

Prime Outer London	4.0%	3.0%	3.0%	2.5%	2.5%	15.9%

“The potential spend of new prospective buyers [was] at a decade-long high of £1.7bn in the 12 months to May.”

We expect a slowing of price growth in the prime property market by the end of this year as supply improves and economic headwinds temper demand. However, interest in the waterfront lifestyle remains high, with web views up 12% in the year to May vs the five-year average, suggesting a period of moderation rather than a dramatic reversal in fortunes is ahead for the waterfront market, which also benefits from its evergreen appeal among buyers.

WATERFRONT BUYERS IN 2022

Buyers from the South East, South West and London were the main purchasers of waterfront homes outside of London in the year to May, making up 72% of purchases collectively. Sales of waterfront properties as second homes increased by 62% in the 12 months to May versus the five-year average, making up 10% of all second home sales transacted by Knight Frank in the UK.

WHERE NEXT FOR PRIME MARKETS?

The UK property market has defied gravity over the course of the pandemic. Tight supply, low interest rates, accumulated household wealth and a desire for more space and greenery have conspired to produce double-digit house price growth over the last year. We believe that 2022 is when this begins to unwind, and growth returns to single figures (see Prime sales market forecast).

In prime central London we forecast 3.5% growth this year as the property market inside zone 1 continues its overdue recovery after six years of political uncertainty and the emergence of a more adverse tax landscape.

We forecast that growth will be 6% in 2023 as the return of international buyers gathers pace, and 22.2% over the next five years, making it the top-performing sector and bucking the overall trend.

We expect prime outer London to continue to benefit from the ‘race for space’ this year, which is likely to tail off from 2023, producing 15.9% growth over the five-year period.

It is a similar story in prime country markets, where prices are forecast to grow 17% over five years. All prime markets are expected to outperform the mainstream, with cumulative growth in the mainstream market expected to be 13.6% from 2022 to 2026.

Owning a slice of paradise has never been more timely – back to the Bahamas we go

The Bahamas, it would seem, is enjoying its time in the sun again. Still extremely popular with US buyers – it's said that it is to Floridians what the Hamptons is to New Yorkers – its appeal might have waned in recent years among the international community. However, a surge in interest from further-flung reaches is now apparent, says Edward de Mallet Morgan, a Partner in Knight Frank's Global Super Prime Residential team.

"Aside from the natural beauty of the region and being surrounded by some of the most beautiful waterscapes in the world," de Mallet Morgan explains, "there's the added bonus of a number of spectacular boutique hotels and excellent restaurants to be found here.

"Its relative secludedness and close-knit community feel make Harbour Island the perfect destination for those looking to get away from it all."

La Palmeraie Villa II is a resplendent beachfront mansion and represents the very slice of paradise buyers can find on the island. Replete with nine bedrooms and 110ft of its own jaw-dropping ocean frontage, the 11,736 sq ft property expertly blends contemporary cool with home comfort and functionality.

A gymnasium, cinema, spa, self-contained staff accommodation and a roof terrace with soaring, 360-degree views, complete this Bahamian dream.

WELCOME TO THE WILD WEST

From the Pebblebed Heaths to the estuaries of the Jurassic Coast, some very special things are happening to unite land and sea conservation efforts in East Devon

The county of Devon stands above nearly any other in England, in terms of richness in biodiversity and differing natural environments. From the vast, sprawling moorlands of Dartmoor National Park, to the lush, rolling valleys of its numerous Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONBs), all this county beholds is sandwiched between two of Britain's most popular heritage coastlines.

Preserving this natural state is no mean feat; ensuring it thrives is even more challenging. Today, doing so is of critical importance when considered against the backdrop of the climate crisis.

Conservation and land management efforts are seen as a key tool in fighting global warming, as the preservation of moors, grasslands, forests and wetlands helps in the sequestration of greenhouse gases like carbon dioxide, and this is before we consider how it supports the myriad ecosystems that exist within them.

Fortunately in East Devon, this is exactly what the expert team of land managers, property developers, conservationists, biologists, farmers, educators and horticultural specialists – among others – do, at Clinton Devon Estates.

Established more than 700 years ago, and owned by Devon's largest landowner, Baron Clinton, Clinton Devon Estates is a land management and property development company, responsible for managing 25,000 acres across three separate estates in the county. These include the Pebblebed Heaths, the Beer and Clinton Estates – in East Devon – and Heanton Estate, in North Devon.

The Estates' labours of love include its stewardship of the East Devon Pebblebed Heaths and the management of the ambitious Lower Otter Estuary Restoration Project, which unite the sprawling Devonshire lowlands with its Jurassic-age coastline.

Recognition for Clinton Devon Estates' work has been forthcoming. In May 2021, the East Devon Pebblebed Heaths became one of Britain's 225 National Nature Reserves (NNRs), building on its status as a Site of Special Scientific Interest (SSSI), as well as a Special Area of Conservation (SAC) and a Special Protection Area (SPA).

Dr Sam Bridgewater, Head of Wildlife and Conservation for Clinton Devon Estates, tells us the status is significant as it "helps ensure the future of the heaths and their wildlife. National Nature Reserves benefit from the highest level of conservation protection available under UK legislation.

"It's also recognition of the hard work not just of the staff of the three partner management organisations, but the many volunteers who give so much of their time to help, all of which is invaluable."

The management partners are the Pebblebed Heaths Conservation Trust, Devon Wildlife Trust and the RSPB. Recognition of the 1,160-hectare site as a NNR, both protects and establishes East Devon Pebblebed Heaths' important habitats, species and geology, and provides an 'outdoor laboratory' for research.

A biodiversity audit in 2016 documented more than 3,000 species of animal across the range of habitats on the heaths, 375 of which have high conservation designations. These include birds and insects such as Dartford warblers, nightjars and the southern damselfly.

Working alongside other environmental groups and governmental bodies, Clinton Devon Estates is creating vital frameworks for other landowners to follow in land recovery and conservation processes. "We're really looking at how an NNR like ours can act as an entry point for land recovery on a much larger scale," Dr Bridgewater says.

"It could, in effect, be the catalyst for what we consider a super NNR. We're looking at how we can join the dots not just within the Heaths itself, but around the wider landscapes. It's very exciting."

One such example is the Lower Otter Restoration Project, which will reconnect the lower estuary of the River Otter to its floodplain, in a practice called realignment. This will allow for the creation of 55 hectares of wetlands, while providing a natural, long-term solution to the threat climate change poses around the estuary, such as a rising sea level and failing sea defences.

The River Otter Estuary already covers an area of 33 hectares and along with the cliffs of Otterton Point is designated a SSSI, thanks to its saltmarsh habitat and adjacent Triassic sandstone rocks. The project will also create new intertidal habitats, which gives nature more space to thrive. This is particularly valuable to over-wintering and migratory birds.

These rare environments support other plants and animals that are specially adapted to thrive in the extreme conditions created by tidal flooding. The new creek network will also provide a highly productive nursery, feeding and spawning ground for commercially and ecologically important fish. These include herring, cod, whiting, sea bass, mackerel, salmon, sea trout and plaice.

An adjunct to the Lower Otter Restoration Project has been the reintroduction of beavers to the River Otter – the first wild population in Britain in 400 years – reflecting Dr Bridgewater's team's insistence on using nature itself to make realignment and recovery projects a success.

"We want to see what benefits beavers can bring, in terms of wetland habitat creation," he says. "We believe their ability to attenuate or stop waterflows will create natural flood defences. But we also must consider the issues they may equally cause, such as the building of culverts, the felling of trees or the flooding of roads. We must be smart about these decisions."

Conservation and realignment efforts are offering natural solutions to very human problems. While the Pebblebed Heaths and the encompassing coastal stretches around the Lower Otter Estuary do not just exist to provide natural habitats to the rare and wonderful, they're landscapes of significant economic and sociological importance to human beings.

The Pebblebed Heaths are visited by more than 400,000 people every year – serving as a vital arena to locals during the Covid pandemic – while patches carry significant agricultural value. Similarly, the River Otter is a source of employment for many, as much as it is a route to the ocean.

For Dr Bridgewater, ensuring its survival for these reasons is just as important as preserving and proliferating natural habitats for non-human species: "I see landscape recovery as something where you look at what's good about the landscape,

"It's as much about stimulating the diversification of our land activities and helping make them productive, as it is about conserving nature."

and see what you want to enhance and expand; see what you want to sort out – say water quality issues, loss of pollinators across agricultural landscape and so forth – and you come up with strategies to fix that."

Ultimately, he adds, this is what true land management is about and its benefits reach beyond the hectares of natural beauty his team presides over: "It's as much about stimulating the diversification of our land activities and helping make them productive, as it is about conserving nature.

"This approach stimulates your regional economy and makes it a much greener one. Ultimately, this is what it looks like to be totally inclusive when we talk about sustainability."

THE BEST OF BOTH WORLDS

Why waterfront developments combine the best of modern living with the natural ideal

Living on the water's edge can wholly capture the imagination in a way other property types may not. For many of us, the dream will remain at arm's length as it is not always the most practical or accessibly property choice. That's why waterfront developments offer the perfect go-between – they combine all the benefits of modern life with the natural aspect waterfront living offers.

Knight Frank Partners Francine Watson and Priya Black tell us about the different lifestyles that can be achieved in their respective markets of the UK's south west, and London's waterfront.

WHAT QUALITIES DO RESIDENTIAL DEVELOPMENTS ON THE WATER OFFER TO HOMEBUYERS TODAY?

FW: The South West property market is often seen as a holiday home haven and coastal or estuary views come high on the 'must have' list for many buyers. Many people find waterfront locations very relaxing, helping them unwind from their busy day-to-day.

PB: As well as the obvious USPs, such as views and proximity to water, typically some of our waterside developments are situated in vibrant waterside communities, such as London's South Bank. The amenities, culture and leisure pursuits, and transport links, are right on your doorstep.

Above and bottom: CGI images of the luxury apartments at Oceanview in Carbis Bay, which have a 24-hour concierge and residents' gym.

WHAT ADVANTAGES MIGHT THEY HAVE OVER MORE CONVENTIONAL WATERFRONT PROPERTIES?

FW: Like any new home, they're equipped to suit modern-day living. Flexible space to live how you want to live is key; it allows for spending time with the family and entertaining friends or guests, but also offers the space to lock yourself away when home working. New homes also tend to be more fuel-efficient and easier to run and maintain.

PB: Typically, larger new-home developments are equipped with on-site amenities such as gyms, business lounges or screening rooms, meaning residents have the dual benefit of choice: they can work and relax at home, or in the community.

IN YOUR REGIONAL MARKETS, WHAT LIFESTYLE BENEFITS DO RESIDENTIAL DEVELOPMENTS OFFER TO BUYERS?

FW: In the South West, it really helps people achieve that healthy life-work balance we often hear about – and is the envy of those wanting to achieve it!

PB: Post-pandemic, exercise and enjoying the outdoors moved up everybody's priority list – two things that can be enjoyed on an urban waterfront, such as in London.

TODAY, WHICH DEVELOPMENTS IN YOUR MARKETS EXCITE YOU?

FW: Oceanview in Carbis Bay is a very exciting opportunity, and is due for completion at the end of the year. Its high-quality apartments are luxuriously finished, have stunning views, a 24-hour concierge, residents' gym, private outside space and communal gardens.

PB: We have been working on the Southbank Place development for nearly 10 years – its exemplar show apartments and outstanding riverside views never fail to impress our teams.

FROM AN INVESTMENT POINT OF VIEW, HOW WELL DO WATERFRONT DEVELOPMENTS PERFORM?

FW: Opportunities to buy them in the very best locations are few and far between. This means they're always in demand and their values are maintained.

HOW CAN KNIGHT FRANK ENSURE YOU ACHIEVE THE BEST PRICE WHEN IT COMES TO SELLING YOUR WATERFRONT PROPERTY?

FW: Many Knight Frank buyers know and trust our brand, whether they're local or international. Our numerous service lines help and support our customers through their property journey, in such an in-depth way other agents can't.

PB: Yes, and we take full advantage of our global network to market sellers' homes to international buyers – waterfront properties are always in high demand.

UK WATERFRONT INDEX

Christopher Bailey

KNIGHT FRANK HEAD OF NATIONAL WATERFRONT

I'm pleased to say the UK's waterfront property market remains in a very healthy position this year. Evidently, the events of the past two years have driven homebuyers towards property types that offer them more space, calm and the opportunity to create healthier lifestyles.

In addition, there's the domestic holiday's escalating influence on buyers wanting to move from urban environments. So, I'd say the outlook is looking rosier. Currently, the race to buy waterfront properties is settling, but remains high – an average 50% across the UK versus non-waterfront properties – while supply is still tight. Coastal destinations in particular are enjoying a continued resurgence in popularity. This is partly boosted by continuing uncertainty around foreign travel. Whilst new developments are easing supply issues, it is at a cost. Still, potential clients seem reluctant to sell as they're realising the value of their property. I think this is being fuelled somewhat by a general change in people's view of home ownership. We're seeing more clients with multiple properties considering their waterfront properties not as a second home, but "another home" where they split their time living equally. For sellers this is heartening, and it's why our dedicated waterfront team exists – to help you make the most of these opportunities.

RIVERSIDE

Britain's waterways play backdrop to some of its most popular towns, cities and villages. They're also the setting for its finest waterfront property. Find the perfect one that suits your pace of life in the following pages

COME ON IN

Looking for one riverside destination like no other?
We have three...

Long immortalised in works of art and literature, Britain's waterways are a talismanic feature of our island nation that represent centuries of evolving transport, industry and trade. But more than anything, our rivers and lakes are overwhelmingly preferred as locations to live next to or on.

Below are three riverside or lakeside locations in Britain we believe encapsulate what it means to live life by the water's edge. Different for varying reasons, they're not necessarily the most obvious locales that come to mind, but we can indeed guarantee they have every ingredient to achieve the idyllic waterfront lifestyle. Our agents are here to explain...

BATTERSEA

A leafy yet lively district of South London, Battersea, SW11, is now one of the city's most rapidly evolved neighbourhoods. Popular with families and young professionals alike, its growing popularity has been bolstered by its world-class café and restaurant culture, beautiful green spaces and community-driven Arts Centre.

Battersea is served by the newly extended Northern Line and the A3 ring road. New residential developments such as Circus West Village and the recently renovated Battersea Power Station are of special interest.

Andrew Fisher, Head of Sales in our Battersea branch, says: "The evolving Battersea property market offers a blend of old and new. Large period homes around Battersea Park are historically snapped up by families looking for easy access to the area's excellent schools, while the new Thames-side developments attract domestic and foreign buyers. The outstanding Battersea Power Station is sure to cement this location as a real destination in the coming years."

OXFORD

Encircled by picturesque scenery, cultural landmarks and architectural beauty, Oxford is a quintessential English city. Popular with those seeking a balance of country life and city convenience, its welcoming local communities, culinary hotspots and world-famous educational institutions have made Oxford a destination for home and away for generations. The waterways that wind through the city are central to its antique charm, and make for commutable options alongside walking and cycling. For those travelling outside of the city for work, London is well served by train, and is approximately an hour and a quarter away.

Oliver Saxton, an Associate in our Oxford office, says: "We have seen the work from home situation provide a huge boost to the local market as lots of people have left the capital.

"Those from areas outside of the city see Oxford as an alternative, providing them with a buzz but also the balance of calm countryside living.

WINDERMERE

A small town that's big on beauty, Windermere is home to England's largest natural lake and encircled by stunning mountain vistas. There's also excellent schooling options and impressive homes, many of which have a rich history. James Denne, Head of our Scottish Borders office, says: "Windermere is iconic. The magic here is the way of life: walking, bird watching, sailing, canoeing. It's a very genteel experience."

Now more accessible than ever – around three hours and 15 minutes by train from London Euston – Windermere is one of the UK's top tourist destinations. It's also evident that an increasing number of people are making short-term retreats more permanent. "The ultimate is to have a lakeside house with a boat house, but those are limited," Denne explains. "Otherwise, it's houses with lake views, or, perhaps a reaction of the past two years, somewhere people can find a sense of isolation. Development is limited, but we are seeing several buildings being developed for holiday lets. It's exciting."

"Britain's waterways are a talismanic feature of our island nation that represent centuries of evolving transport, industry and trade. But more than anything, our rivers and lakes are overwhelmingly preferred as locations to live next to or on."

THE FINEST HOUSE ON THE RIVER

Wind your way up the Thames and you'll find magnificent Riverside Manor those entering the main house, to a vast ballroom – yes, an actual ballroom, which accommodates up to 230 guests – or the state-of-the-art pool and spa complex linked to the property by a glazed bridge, an unerring commitment to reaching an exemplary standard of finish is clear. As such, it warrants its price tag of £36.5 million ($46.88 million).

The setting alone means Riverside Manor is certain to have a suitor - and soon - says Knight Frank Partner and the head of its Country Department's Super Prime Team, James Crawford: "Riverside homes have their own special allure and with very few properties in this waterfront location on the market, we're expecting a considerable interest for Riverside Manor – both domestically and from international buyers."

The 26,637 sq ft main house features an elevator, dining room, study, sitting room, drawing room and a spectacular river room overlooking the Thames, while additional amenities are as vast as they are varied. Aside from the ballroom, there's a billiards room and home cinema; a spacious wine cellar, and the aforementioned swimming pool, sauna, spa, treatment rooms and gym complex.

Three staff apartments, a guest pavilion and guest house that has another six bedrooms – all finished to the same exacting standard of the main property – ample garaging and a boathouse complete the estate, and the claim to Riverside Manor being one of the finest waterfront properties in the UK. Riverside Manor has a guide price of £36,500,000.

inspired the location for Grahame's classic 1908 children's novel.

And while there are obvious points of difference between prose and design – and the likelihood Grahame drew inspiration from the grand estates of nearby Fawley Court, Hardwick House and Mapledurham House – the project's mission statement was clear: to create a modern homestead on the northernmost banks of the River Thames that could bear a similar appellation.

Every detail across the 33,435 sq ft of accommodation, and the 4.5 acres of beautifully manicured lawns and gardens, is what sets Riverside Manor apart from its contemporaries.

From the two sweeping staircases that greet

“It is a handsome, dignified old house of mellowed red brick, with well-kept lawns reaching down to the water's edge. Its owner is in no doubt as to its merits: 'Finest house on the whole river,' cried Toad boisterously. 'Or anywhere else, for that matter.'”

Perhaps this passage from Kenneth Grahame's The Wind in the Willows drifted through the minds of architects at EPR or William Bertram as they worked to bring the palatial Riverside Manor to life.

After all, the ambitious seven-to-eleven-bedroom, eight-bathroom home is situated just outside the Buckinghamshire village of Cookham, the sleepy riverside idyll said to have

COASTAL

The UK's coastal property market has been thriving, thanks in no small part to the different lifestyles that it allows for. From the beaches where active pursuits and watersports can be enjoyed, to the peaceful villages set against endless sea views, there is something for all

ALDEBURGH

Looking for a coastal destination like no other?
We have three...

As an island nation, the UK is spoiled for choice when it comes to its coastlines. From the rugged, otherworldliness of the northern-most stretches, to the picture-postcard quaintness of the most southern, they're cherished destinations to holiday, work or live next to.

The Covid pandemic has been partly responsible for a resurgence in coastal living's popularity, and there are few signs this trend is slowing down. For those still looking, we can guide you on your search, especially if you're looking for a destination to end up in that's not quite end-of-the-earth, but certainly a better-kept secret. Allow our agents to explain...

With its quaint, pastel-hued homes and amply furnished high street, which offers a mix of high-end high street with excellent independent, Aldeburgh is arguably one of East Anglia's most popular destinations for holidaymakers and second-home owners alike.

Beyond the vibrant arts scene, varied eating and drinking choices, and direct situation on the coast, the local area also has excellent walking routes across the marshes next to the River Alde or on the popular route to Thorpeness. George Bramley, a Partner in Knight Frank's Country Department, believes this gives it a fully rounded appeal: "There's a great entrepreneurial buzz to be found in Aldeburgh, with artists, designers and authors all setting up home here. The area is very desirable to second home owners, too, thanks to the popular Aldeburgh Golf Club and Yacht Club."

Local attractions include Sutton Hoo, Snape Maltings, Dunwich Heath and the RSPB Minsmere Nature Reserve.

LYMINGTON

The historic market town of Lymington lies on a scenic stretch of coastline at the edge of the New Forest, between Bournemouth and Southampton. Popular with buyers of all types - families, second home buyers and city dwellers looking to relocate - it's easy to see why it's considered a crowning gem for Hampshire.

"Lymington has beautiful Georgian and Victorian architecture, a rich and colourful maritime history and plenty of stunning local beauty spots. It's perfect for a spring or summer getaway," says Toby Turnage, head of Knight Frank's new virtual office in the area.

"You have access to some of the best UK sailing on your doorstep, and, further inland there are plenty of country pursuits to be enjoyed, from horse riding to hiking," Toby continues. "It roughly takes one hour and 45 minutes to Waterloo by train, so it's commutable too. Naturally, demand for property here is incredibly high."

SALCOMBE

Perhaps one of South Devon's most desirable areas, Salcombe lies within an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty and is well-known for the outdoorsy lifestyle it offers locals. An active shellfish fishing industry and a plethora of quality pubs and restaurants also make the town a hotspot for foodies.

As such, Salcombe remains one of the UK's best-loved holiday destinations, flocked by around 17,000 Brits each summer. Christopher Bailey, head of Knight Frank's National Waterfront team, says its popularity is reflected in the value of its property: "The town has seen some of the greatest growth in property prices over the past 20 years, and according to at least one national mortgage lending survey, has the most expensive average house price compared to any other coastal resort nationally."

"Salcombe is a brand in itself and is synonymous with luxury waterside living, dinghy racing, a base for sale cruising and of course family beach holidays - it has a lot to offer."

"From the rugged, otherworldliness of the northern-most stretches of coastline, to the picture-postcard quaintness of the most southern, they're cherished destinations to holiday, work or live next to."

SIDMOUTH'S JURASSIC HEART

Introducing a landmark property on the Devon coast

Perched upon a clifftop near the middle of Devon's ancient Jurassic Coast, Grade II listed Clifton Cottage is a singularly special property which combines the perfect blend of situation, space and seascape.

From its uninterrupted views over the glistening English Channel, to the central location in the popular coastal town of Sidmouth, it represents the rare opportunity to own a landmark property rich in history, on one of the most desirable stretches of Britain's coastline.

Clifton Cottage is a spacious five-bedroom family home, with five bathrooms (one en suite) and four large reception rooms, spread across nearly 5,000 sq ft. Once owned by Emmanuel Lousada, a London-born merchant who became the High Sheriff of Devon in 1842, the cottage served as his 'beach house' from 1820.

Given Lousada's considerable wealth, and appetite for extravagant displays of it – his primary residence, the original Peak House, was one of the county's finest manor houses – it's easy to see why the cottage's ornate appearance drew the merchant to making it a summer bolthole.

The property as a whole allows for light to be captured, and enjoyed, at all times of the day. The south east-facing morning room bathes occupants in morning light, while a west-facing drawing room allows them to follow it as the sun sets.

What really sets Clifton Cottage apart from other waterfront properties is its established and beautifully maintained west-facing garden, providing a mass of colour through the spring and summer months. A paved terrace looks out over the sea and private steps lead down to a beach. The house is accessed via electric gates, with ample private parking offered on the driveway and single-car garage.

Knight Frank Partner and head of the Country Department's South West team, Hamish Humfrey, says: "We anticipate Clifton Cottage will attract significant interest through the summer. It's a landmark property in the area, offering the rare combination of privacy, direct beach access and beautiful established gardens."

INTERNATIONAL WATERFRONT INDEX

Mark Harvey

PARTNER, HEAD OF INTERNATIONAL RESIDENTIAL

The allure of waterfront homes remains strong and one of the most compelling property choices for international buyers today. As such, the rarity and exclusivity of this asset class commands a significant premium over comparable homes further inland; making them a good choice as a long-term investment.

Over the last year, we have seen significant interest in major metropolitan cities with waterfront offerings. Locations such as Sydney, Dubai, Los Angeles, Miami and Auckland in particular have set the trend, with Sydney at the top of our International Waterfront Index markets by premium.

Destinations such as the Hamptons, the Caribbean and the Mediterranean are also proving hugely popular as more and more clients feel less tied down to a single destination and begin to integrate work into their “co-primary” homes. Interestingly, 42% of buyers feel more likely to purchase a waterfront property now than pre-pandemic. A combination of the post pandemic “race for space” and the sheer rarity value have driven waterfront home prices to new heights - a trend which is likely to endure for the foreseeable future.

MELBOURNE SAW THE LARGEST INCREASE IN WATERFRONT PROPERTY PRICES IN THE 12 MONTHS TO JUNE 2022 AT 23.2%. PARIS WAS SECOND AND HONG KONG THIRD, WITH INCREASES OF 22.4% AND 22% RESPECTIVELY. PERTH (+17.8%) AND GENEVA (+16.7%) COMPLETE THE TOP FIVE.

RIVIERA RESPLENDENCE

A rare chance to own a touch of Belle Époque glamour

Of the many towns and villages that line the French Riviera, the Mediterranean fishing village of Cap Ferrat on the eponymous peninsular of Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat, stands apart in its splendour. It may be named the ‘Billionaires’ Peninsula’, but there is also an understated elegance to a locale with France’s second most-expensive postcode.

Also known by the eponym, the Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat encapsulates old Riviera glamour and the serenity of the town’s minuscule local population. Cutting a striking figure on the coastline in dazzling shell-pink is this charming and substantial property, split between two quite differently styled villas: the opulent, Belle Époque-style main villa and Mediterranean Beach House. Several large terraces with panoramic sea views and the allure of direct access to the water’s edge make it just the place to relish the captivating lifestyle of the Cote d’Azur.

The property has been thoughtfully renovated by its current owner. Classic white columns, rustic shutters and Italian-style gardens mix with 21st century mod cons. The main villa boasts a grand, open-plan lounge/dining room with large windows that fill the house with light and frame the stunning coastline view. There are eight bedrooms overall plus an independent guest studio, a two-bedroom staff apartment and five off-street parking spaces.

Above: the dazzling shell-pink property has a tunnel leading to a private area by the sea.

“Few properties of such calibre come onto the market that are waterfront on Cap Ferrat and when they do, they always receive considerable interest,” says Edward de Mallet Morgan, a Partner in Knight Frank’s Global Super Prime Residential team. “One of the unique elements about the property is a tunnel under the path in front, to a private area for dining or sunbathing, or to access your boat, right on the sea.

“For entertaining and enjoying the view, there is a raised terrace and dining area, but for privacy and peace and quiet, I love that the garden and swimming pool is a totally private haven, with glimpses of the sea back through the property.”

Cap Ferrat’s notoriety as the most sought-after address on the French Riviera dates back to the 1800s. Pablo Picasso, Jean Cocteau and Yves Saint Laurent have all soaked up the sea air at the famous Villa Santo Sospir, or on the golden sands of beaches Paloma or Cros Dei Pin.

Golden-age Hollywood stars and royalty propelled its reputation for glittering excess in the 1950s, while today you’ll find international A-listers, politicians and tech titans holidaying here, many of them in their own homes.

“The view here is to the east, back towards Monaco. In the summer months the crystal-clear sea is beautiful for swimming and the view is interspersed by superyachts, with the backdrop of the hills and mountains behind. It is a very special property.”

Toby Turnage is skipper of Knight Frank's virtual office in Lymington, Hampshire.

FINAL VIEW

COMING FULL CIRCLE

Knight Frank Partner, Toby Turnage, recently returned to his native Hampshire from London to head up the “virtual” Lymington office. Here, he tells us what it's like returning to his home town, running a special digital-first venture, and what's happening in his local area

WHAT'S THE SOUTH COAST MARKET LIKE FOR WATERFRONT PROPERTY TODAY?

In short, the market for best-in-class waterfront property is competitive to say the least. Demand is incredibly high. With so much of the frontage protected (particularly near Lymington and Beaulieu) it's rare to see existing properties come on the market – new sites are as rare as hens' teeth.

YOU'RE HEAD OF KNIGHT FRANK'S 'VIRTUAL' LYMINGTON OFFICE - WHAT'S IT LIKE OPERATING A DIGITAL-FIRST VENTURE?

It's a wonderful opportunity, and very exciting. I grew up here (about five minutes from where I live now) and have spent my life sailing these coastlines, so it's great to be back.

It seems the need for a traditional office is declining. In London, for example, a number of estate agencies have been working under the virtual model for years with great success. And if the last two years have taught us anything, it's that certain industries can function just as well without physical office space, at no detriment to clients or their needs.

In my opinion, estate agency can make this transition with very little fuss, and our Lymington office is evidence of that.

YOU MOVED FROM WANDSWORTH TO HAMPSHIRE. WHAT'S THE BIGGEST DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE PROPERTY MARKETS?

The London market is very evidence-based when it comes to pricing. You can easily find a number of comparables to back up a price (as can buyers), whereas here, price feels more sentiment-based due to the variables of what's on the market.

WHICH ARE THE MOST EXCITING, UP-AND-COMING AREAS IN YOUR REGION?

The Isle of Wight is a great proposition for anyone wanting a change of pace or a second home. It's been overlooked for years by its neighbours Devon and Cornwall, but with its great beaches, water sports, adventure experiences and new restaurants popping up, the Isle of Wight is a fantastic place to spend time. You can reach it in about two and a half hours from London, too.

WHAT ARE YOUR FAVOURITE LOCAL SPOTS?

Boldre and Shirley Holms are wonderful. You're outside of the town centre, but you can cycle there within a few minutes. Beaulieu is another great location – a historic riverside village with beautiful architecture. If you're looking for top-quality restaurants, check out Milford-on-Sea. There's a lovely ambience there, down by the waterfront.

DO YOU HAVE ANY ADVICE FOR ANYONE MOVING FROM LONDON TO LYMINGTON - OR SOMEWHERE SIMILAR?

Being fast-moving is crucial; the market here is very different to London, where, if you miss out on a property, you might get 10 more come to market in the same road that year. If you think a property works, you have to jump on it. Ultimately, you need to have everything lined up as far in advance as possible.
