THE REGION - 4 PARISHES

1. Jefferson Parish

The most populous parish in the Greater New Orleans region, Jefferson Parish is the business gateway to Southeast Louisiana. Jefferson Parish boasts an exceptional transportation infrastructure including large port operations, major railways and the Louis Armstrong International Airport in Kenner.

2. Orleans Parish

Orleans Parish has access to the Port of New Orleans, major railways, and close proximity to the New Orleans International Airport. With an established and widening industrial base including stalwarts such as energy, trade, and advanced manufacturing, as well as emerging strengths like film and digital media, the parish has significant resources and participation invested by both public and private organizations.

3. St. Bernard Parish

Boasting an outstanding transportation infrastructure – complete access to water, motor, and rail freight transportation, and three major highways – St. Bernard Parish is home to flourishing petrochemical, oil and gas, seafood processing, and commercial fishing industries.

4. Plaquemines Parish

Plaquemines Parish is located at the Southeastern-most tip of Louisiana and acts as the operational center for the offshore oil and gas industry. The Parish is also home to the Naval Air Station Joint Reserve Base, the Louisiana seafood industry, major petrochemical refineries and coal transfer terminals, and traditional agriculture. Plaquemines Parish represents one of the most promising areas for industrial growth.
