Who we are

Studio A is a Sydney based social enterprise that makes great art and specifically provides professional pathways for artists with intellectual disability. We are the only studio of our kind in NSW.

Through Studio A, our artists are visible and valued: exhibiting and selling their work; winning awards; securing commissions; supplying creative services to leading Australian corporations, arts institutions and designers; and bringing joy and life to public and private spaces.

Studio A is driven to ensure artists with intellectual disability have a voice in contemporary Australian culture and to provide income to our artists. Fostering and valuing our artists' creative talent proves that with the right support systems, artists with intellectual disability can practice as professionals.

Studio A provides its artists with a working studio space equipped with specialist materials and support staff. We also manage an annual exhibition program and facilitate weekly workshops provided by invited contemporary artists.

Studio A supports a variety of artists working within a range of disciplines and thus strategically links Studio A artwork with an equally diverse range of target markets including art, design, craft, and corporate markets. We have an established record of strong/sustained creative partnerships and collaborations ranging from corporates to creatives to cultural institutions. Clients and partners include Westpac, mud Australia and the Museum of Contemporary Art.

Studio A contributes to various personal outcomes for the artists including increased self esteem, increased aspirations for the future, broader social networks and a sense of belonging, increased financial security and improved mental health. More broadly, within the community Studio A reduces stigma associated with people with disability, and increases diversity and inclusion. Studio A offers the mainstream arts sector access to new artists and new opportunities for unique collaborations.

A message from the CEO

In a year when the world locked down in response to a global pandemic, Studio A artwork became more visible than ever.

We produced over 1000 metres of public art and seven Studio A artists (Victoria Atkinson, Katrina Brennan, Emily Crockford, Annette Galstaun, Meagan Pelham, Lisa Scott & Damian Showyin) were commissioned by the University of Technology Sydney. In 2019 our artists were paid to create a major artwork Bird Life Jungle Disco for this esteemed university.

Artists with intellectual disability have historically been locked out of such educational institutions. Commissions of this calibre demonstrate the progress Australia is making in embracing a more diverse and dynamic cultural life.

This Annual Report proudly showcases the serious contribution artists with disability are making. Our artists beautify city streets, undertake international and cross-cultural creative collaborations, manifest internal universes into immersive installations and at times literally sprinkle romance across the city.

As all the best artists do, Studio A artists use their skilled visual language to reinvigorate the familiar and show the world through a fresh, new, sparkly lens.

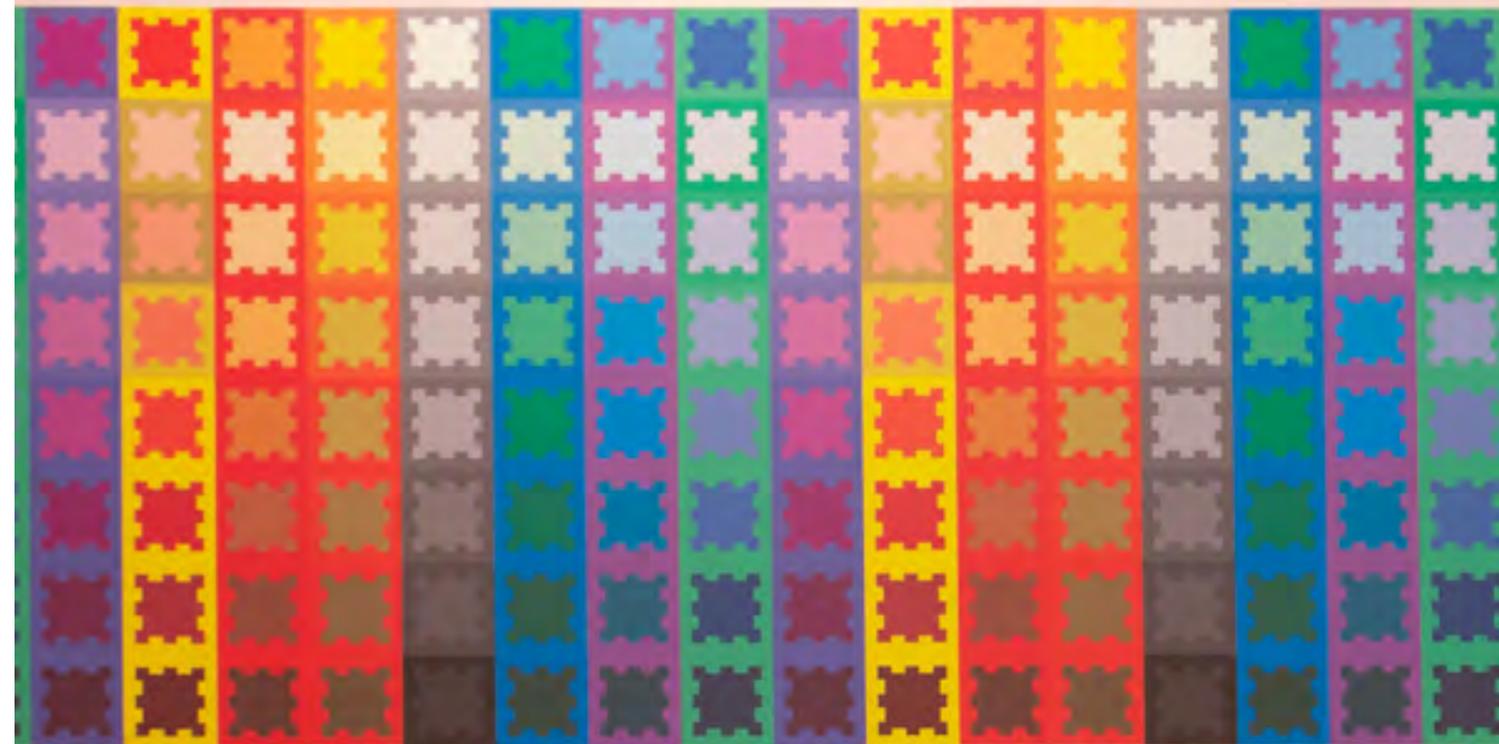

It is an honour and privilege to lead Studio A's team to see our artists' potential realised. Our achievements are utterly the outcome of an effective community working together; the fusion of our artists' talent, our tireless Board's skill and generosity, our dedicated staff, countless volunteers, committed family members and most importantly our network of supporters, donors and clients.

It is the energy and input of all these elements that empower Studio A to produce the excellence on show throughout this report.

Personally, Studio A fills me with joy. Over many years I have worked daily with our artists and team. The magical activity of this community never fails to inspire me. I am ever energised by experiencing the warm glow of pride and satisfaction I witness on our artist's faces each time they are recognised as talented artists.

Thank you to all who energise Studio A, and a particular warm thanks to our exceptional Chairman Shane Simpson AM.

A message from the Chairman

This report covers a time of tranquillity and a time of pandemic – first a period of ‘business as usual’ for our artists, and then a time of threat, isolation and uncertainty.

Studio A had to pivot from being entirely studio-based, to a remote, work-from-home model. It was a very new world. Many of our artists didn’t have, and had never used, computers or iPads. Many of our artists had to be trained how to use the technology to make and deliver their art. Zoom sessions with their mentors became standard practice. But through it all, the artists continued to be committed to making their art and delivering on their projects; they continued to create, exhibit, sell, license their work and undertake huge commissions. As you will see from this report, the work that they have done is extraordinary – not just in quality but in quantity!

Even though I am intimately involved with the organisation, I marvel at how a small, supported studio could have achieved everything described in this report. It could only happen because of the people who make up the Studio A family: the artists, their mentors, the board, our philanthropists (both individual and corporate) and the government. I also acknowledge the wonderful leadership of our CEO and Artistic Director, Gabrielle Mordy and our Principal Artist mentor, Emma Johnson: they embody the vision, dedication, and ethical core of the Studio A team.

As you read this report, you will be astounded by the artists’ work - but keep in mind what this lean, highly motivated, supported studio contributes to the individual lives of those artists and to the richness of the community in which we live.

Impact statement

In 2020 Studio A made the important decision to measure the effectiveness of its activities and understand the changes brought about by those activities. It did this by developing and implementing an Impact Assessment methodology, delivering its first Impact Statement for 2019/20.

To measure if Studio A is achieving its mission: Studio A's Impact Assessment methodology was developed by thoroughly assessing the organisations' activities and outputs. Data is now collected from diverse sources to demonstrate the outcomes of the work of Studio A and the impact of this work on the artists, the organisation and the broader community.

The impressive results of this first Impact Assessment were proudly shared with our community and generous supporters.

home

Retort House, Sub Base Platypus, North Sydney
18 October - 2 November 2019

home: [hom] n.

- 1. the place where one lives permanently, especially as a member of a family or household.
- 2. an institution for people needing professional care or supervision.

Home is a concept familiar and relevant to all but a reality experienced diversely. Moving out of home is a milestone moment in anyone's life. Living independently with an intellectual disability involves added challenges and hence is particularly significant. The potency of this subject inspired home, a Studio A group show curated by Gabrielle Mordy.

For the exhibition, Gabrielle asked ten Studio A artists – Victoria Atkinson, Thom Roberts, Katrina Brennan, Meagan Pelham, Guy Fredericks, Daniel Kim, Phil Sidney, Mathew Calandra, Annette Galstaun and Emily Crockford – to respond to the idea of 'dream home'. Utilising mediums spanning animation, augmented reality, textiles, painting and sculpture, they showed that home is not physical but in our relationships – in our dream loves, families, pets, loved ones and city circle lines.

Situated in the centuries-old Retort House and decidedly site specific, the works in home offered an opportunity to literally step inside an artwork, to be immersed. Audiences were showered in the lights and sparkles of Emily Crockford's Disco Dream House; were drawn into Thom Roberts' animated alternate universe in City Circle Line; and we ourselves animated Meagan Pelham's giant bride and groom marionettes, to see them wave as if king and queen of the land.

home was created with support from the Australia Council for the Arts, Create NSW, Big Anxiety Festival and our official partner, Harbour Trust, who honoured us with the inaugural exhibition at Retort House.

"I dream of living in a disco house. Swimming in sparkling colour and feeling so good, good, good."

Mobile Colour

Cement Fondu, Paddington
6 - 19 March 2020

“Colourful patterns inspire a sense of warmth and love, like the tin man finding his heart. I would love to live in a colourful mansion with the tin man and his heart.”

- Katrina Brennan

Continuing our partnership with Sydney gallery Cement Fondu, on March 7 2020 Studio A presented Mobile Colour, a group show of three Studio A artists: Jaycee Kim, Katrina Brennan and Emily Crockford. It was inspired by the artists’ deep connections with colour and pattern.

Drawing on their established repertoires of palette and form the artists created a space that danced and vibrated with bright hues and intricate repetitions. In this vibrancy, the artists find calm and focus; a sense of identity and place. Audiences were invited to bathe in this energetic aesthetic.

The exhibition also saw Jaycee Kim, Studio A’s newest artist, present his first major body of work. It included augmented reality wallpaper, a bespoke chess set with each piece made in his own image, and a series of watercolours centred around his alter ego, a Loreto school girl. On opening night, audiences were invited into an epic chess battle with Jaycee on his Ultimate Chess Board artwork. (Jaycee reigned victorious!)

Jaycee’s presentation was the culmination of yearlong mentorship arrangement between Studio A and Studio ARTES: a Professional Pathways Award sponsored by Liberty Special Markets. Jaycee is a committed and evolving artist and at the conclusion of his mentorship was offered a permanent place at Studio A.

“My work is about transformation. The degradation of colour reflects and allows the expression in my brain to change. Rainbow colours allow me to change colours and moods. The chess characters are inspired by my watercolour paintings. Using my new creative ensemble I invite you to check mate with my duplicates.”

Crows Nesting and Peacock Wallaby

Peacock Gallery, Auburn
10 August - 8 September 2019

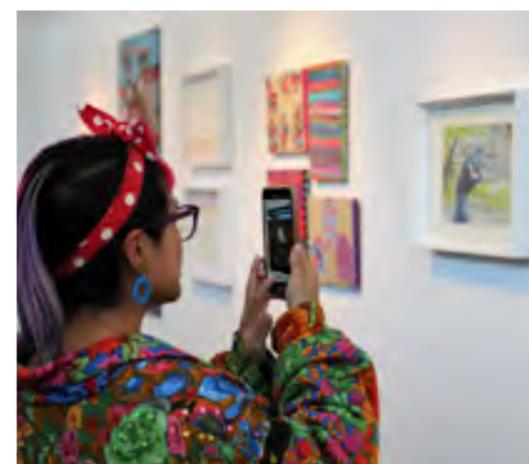

Migrating birds frequently visit Auburn's Botanic Gardens. In 2019 a flock of artists joined the migration.

From June to August 2019, seven Studio A artists – Katrina Brennan, Emily Crockford, Guy Fredericks, Lauren Kerjan, Daniel Kim, Catherine McGuinness and Damian Showyin – were the official artists-in-residence at Auburn Arts Studio and Peacock Gallery. There they took inspiration from the surrounding botanic gardens – spectacular, and replete with orange blossoms, parrots, peacocks and wallabies – to develop new work for exhibition. The resulting show, titled Crows Nesting, saw Lauren Kerjan exhibit Magical Birds, Damian Showyin a Peacock Person and Catherine McGuinness a series of garden-inspired characters: 'cockadoos', 'sunbaking kangaroos' and 'a little mermaid swimming in a pool'.

Studio A went on to develop a second exhibition for Peacock Gallery, this one in collaboration with the Markers Circle (a collective of local artists and craftspeople), students from Auburn West Primary School and members from the broader community. Together they created an installation featuring a mythical, half-peacock half-wallaby creature called 'the Peacock Wallaby'. Studio A's Guy Fredericks made the body of the creature and members of the local community contributed handcrafted feathers to make the cloak.

Oddysee

Cement Fondu, Paddington
3 August - 29 September 2019

In August 2019, in Cement Fondu's Project Space, Skye Saxon presented Oddysee, the manifestation of a yearlong project working with artist Katy B Plummer and her first solo show.

Skye draws on memories and dreams to create mystic characters and magical stories. Oddysee – a magical circus tent come multimedia art installation – was the fullest expression of her vision to date. It offered a window into an alternate universe, accessible only to Skye. A place where Skye Fox (Saxon's alter ego) and her band of skilled misfits, Hank Octomon, Babaluey, Fauramondo ("the DJ Catfish"), Sugar Mama and Katerina the Steampunk Ringmaster live out their mystical lives.

The installation was composed of soft sculptures of each character, lovingly willed into existence by Saxon and Plummer, and a film of Skye recounting their many adventures together, produced by Kuba Dorabialski.

"It's a way of expressing what you can't say in ordinary words"

Sydney Contemporary

Carriageworks, Eveleigh
12 - 15 September 2019

Studio A was delighted to be invited to exhibit again at Sydney Contemporary in 2019. Sydney Contemporary is Australasia's premier contemporary art fair, showcasing the region's largest and most diverse gathering of local and international galleries.

This time Studio A showcased a suite of artists, including Emily Crockford, Catherine McGuinness, Lauren Kerjan, Meagan Pelham, Skye Saxon, Kristel Saxon, Thom Roberts, Greg Sindel, Phil Sidney and Guy Fredericks. Works ranged from drawings and paintings, to graphic novels and small sculptures. Guy Frederick's premiered his new major paper and digital art installation Big Home for Beagles, which later featured in Studio A's landmark exhibition, home, at Sub Base Platypus, North Sydney.

In exhibiting a suite of artists, we were able to showcase the breadth of Studio A's creative capabilities and afforded more of our artists the opportunity to present and sell their work (and sell they did!). Conversations were shared with fellow artists, collectors and curators; networks were broadened and great art was exhibited to an enthusiastic community.

"I sold 3 animal sculptures last year at Sydney Contemporary. [That] was a pretty proud moment!"

Peter & Paul In Print

Hazelhurst Arts Centre, Gymea
7 - 26 March 2020

In 2019 Peter Dudding and his long time collaborator Paul Williams were invited to undertake a three month residency at Hazelhurst Arts Centre with master printmaker Matthew Ablitt.

Matthew introduced Peter and Paul to two techniques sympathetic to their established painting and drawing practices: monoprinting and etching. The fluidity of painted monoprints and the resistance of the etched mark provided a method that was familiar yet fresh, inspiring experimentation.

The resulting works were exhibited in March 2020 at Hazelhurst Arts Centre under the apt title Peter & Paul in Print.

“I liked printmaking and watching and learning about art making with Paul...My favourite song from the studio time was Morning Train by Sheena Easton”.

- Peter Dudding

Hazelhurst Art on Paper Award 2019, Hazelhurst Arts Centre, 21 September - 17 November 2019

In 2019 Peter Dudding exhibited in the prestigious Hazelhurst Art on Paper Award. His Happy Birthday 2, an energetic abstract featuring his familiar textual scrawl, was selected from over 800 entries and exhibited alongside some of Australia’s most esteemed artists including Adrienne Doig, Deborah Kelly, Peter Sharp and longtime collaborator Paul Williams.

Bird Life Jungle Disco

Victoria Atkinson, Katrina Brennan, Emily Crockford, Annette Galstaun, Meagan Pelham, Lisa Scott and Damian Showyin

Commissioned by University of Technology Sydney (UTS)
UTS Central, installed August 2019

7 artists, 7 support crew, 55 birds,
175 sq metres of vibrant public art!

Invited to enliven the newest social hub at University of Technology Sydney - UTS Central - and tell the story of the wider world in which students live and learn, Studio A artists Victoria Atkinson, Katrina Brennan, Emily Crockford, Annette Galstaun, Meagan Pelham, Lisa Scott and Damian Showyin, with 7 support crew members, hand painted this 175 square metre mural. This very large artwork features 55 birds of all shapes, sizes and colours.

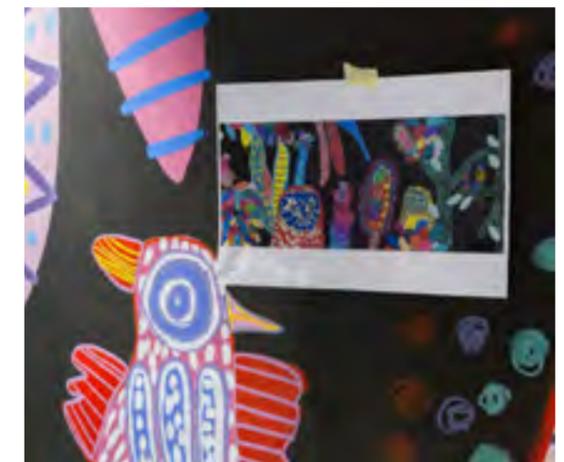

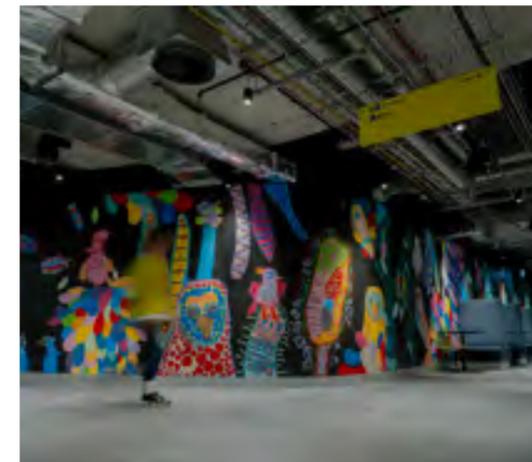

Bird Life Jungle Disco was commissioned by UTS ART. Since opening in August 2019 it's been seen by thousands of students every day.

"Bird Life Jungle Disco tells a colourful story of birds and animals at play in a busy social world. The mural speaks to the character and passion of each of the artists who made it, and to the diversity and energy of the UTS community itself."

“Mural breaks barriers to a diverse world of public art” Sydney Morning Herald

“I was imagining the koalas, some daisies and cockies and bottlebrush. The owls are singing and the tweety birds are watching and listening.”

- Emily Crockford

Commissioned by Lendlease to provide an engaging and colourful edge to their Barangaroo development, Emily designed this 160m hoarding.

Loved by construction workers, office tenants, families and visitors to Barangaroo, Garden Pop Bird Pop was headlined, “Mural breaks barriers to a diverse world of public art” by the Sydney Morning Herald and described it as a “...a riot of colour, displaying the young artist’s characteristic use of intricate patterns inspired by the natural world.” June 18 2020, Nick Galvin.

“We are thrilled with Emily’s artwork and her response to the brief. The artwork “Garden Pop Bird Bop” is filled with life and colour.”

Licensed by City of Sydney

Creative City Hoardings across Sydney, from May 2020

City of Sydney's Creative Hoarding program showcases artists' work on a large scale in very visible locations, beautifying and transforming the visual impact of construction sites throughout the city.

Selected from a national call out for artwork concepts, Midnight Zoo features the work of Emily Crockford, Lauren Kerjan, Thom Roberts and Phil Sidney. This evocative design, inspired by the artists' visit to Taronga Zoo has been installed in at least 12 locations across the city since its release in May 2020.

Midnight Zoo "... is a collaborative homage to the diverse and mesmerising species that populate our city and our world."

Studio A x Live Softly

November 2019 saw the launch of Studio A's collection of 100% wool felted puppets, inspired by Australian fauna and created in partnership with fellow social enterprise Live Softly.

In development since mid 2018, the range was designed by Studio A artists Meagan Pelham, Damian Showyin, Skye Saxon and Lisa Scott and produced by marginalised artisans in Nepal living with disability.

The furry felted creations celebrate Australia's diverse wildlife and were made available on the Studio A Web Shop and retailers around the state including the Australian Design Centre and Koskela. We are very proud of this range of Studio A design products, the result of an ethical international collaboration that will see the employment of artists and artisans with disability both locally and abroad.

Societas Raffaello Sanzio residency with Thom Roberts

In September 2019 Thom Roberts and Emma Johnston (Principal Artist, Studio A) travelled to Cesena, Italy to undertake a residency at the Societas Raffaello Sanzio, an established and renowned experiential theatre company.

For ten days Thom worked with Chiara Guidi (Director of Societas Raffaello Sanzio Director), Teodora Castalucci (performer at Societas Raffaello Sanzio), Scott Wright (Artistic Director, Erth Visual and Physical Theatre) and selected creatives, to explore new modes of performance art, including dance, light and shadow, set and costume design, film and virtual reality. The residency culminated in a theatrical nighttime performance experiment in a nineteenth century outdoor theatre at Giardino Pubblico, Cesena.

Thom and Emma also visited the 2019 Venice Biennale: 'May You Live In Interesting Times' curated by Ralph Rugoff. Thom was particularly struck by the works of Nabuqi and Lorenzo Quinn. Thom Roberts' residency at Societas Raffaello Sanzio was generously supported by the Copyright Agency Cultural Fund.

"Last year in August Thom & Woody took the trip to Venice AND Italy! Yes! With Coyote & Millennium train. I'm proud by closing those doors in the aeroplane flight!"

Meagan Pelham x Romance Was Born

With a special collection released for Valentine's Day 2020, Studio A's Meagan Pelham joined the ranks of artists like Jenny Kee and Del Kathryn Barton in collaborating with Australian design house Romance Was Born.

Meagan's Love Owls motif was screen-printed on cotton jersey tees, accompanied by dreamy text written by the artist on the back. This design was followed up with a range of hand dyed items featuring Meagan's artwork.

Artistic collaboration is integral to how Romance Was Born designs; they carefully choose artists who share their creative passion and dedication to the process. Anna Plunkett and Luke Sales of Romance Was Born reached out to Studio A with the specific intention of working with Meagan. They had fallen in love with her work and were enamoured with her art practice.

With a reputation for creating beautifully intricate and dreamy otherworldly designs, we couldn't think of a more perfect fashion pairing for Studio A's Love Poem Sorceress.

Meagan Pelham x Romance Was Born collection.

Fuji Xerox

In November 2019 artist Thom Roberts took inspiration from Fuji Xerox staff and machinery to deliver a unique and interactive creative experience. Thom invited staff to participate in a fun, creative engagement session guaranteed to build deeper connections within and between teams while also providing a new, energising perspective on the meaning and impact of Fuji Xerox within the community.

Staff were invited to bring in childhood photos of themselves, which Thom used as the basis to demonstrate the transformative process of the Fuji Xerox machine. Using the photocopier, Thom connected participants' childhood photos, forging them into a train to create a surprising printed outcome. Following the creative workshop, Thom returned to Studio A where he developed and refined an original artwork for exhibition at Fuji Xerox.

Liberty Specialty Markets

Studio A created a dreamy Christmas party for Liberty Speciality Markets' (LSM) staff with a series of large sculptural handbound dream catchers. The large statement sculptures were accompanied by a collection of small scale intimate dream catchers. Each table was adorned with a Studio A original reindeer centrepiece. The decorative sculptures infused the occasion with a touch of magic, encouraging LSM's team to loosen their antlers and embrace the spirit of the festive season.

Studio A's decorative sculptures have become an annual tradition at LSM's end of year party. For over five consecutive years our artists have beautified the company's event with bespoke ornaments designed to a unique theme.

In 2020 LSM and Studio A launched a new international partnership. The 'In Our Art Program' connects Studio A to LSM's international art awards designed to support emerging artists.

Studio A invited four artists to create work for exhibition in LSM's Sydney CBD offices. The 2020 artists included Guy Fredericks, Annette Galstaun, Lauren Kerjan and Jaycee Kim.

LSM staff select two of the exhibited works to be sent to London to participate in LSM's global Art Awards program. The selected artists win a $3000 mentorship program and $1000 licensing fee to see their artwork applied to a range of Liberty Specialty Markets merchandise.

Westpac

Studio A brought flight and fantasy to Westpac's events and functions in 2019. Annette Galstaun's bespoke design of patterned birds dancing was licensed to feature on a limited edition range of tote bags presented to guests at the Westpac Foundation Awards Dinner.

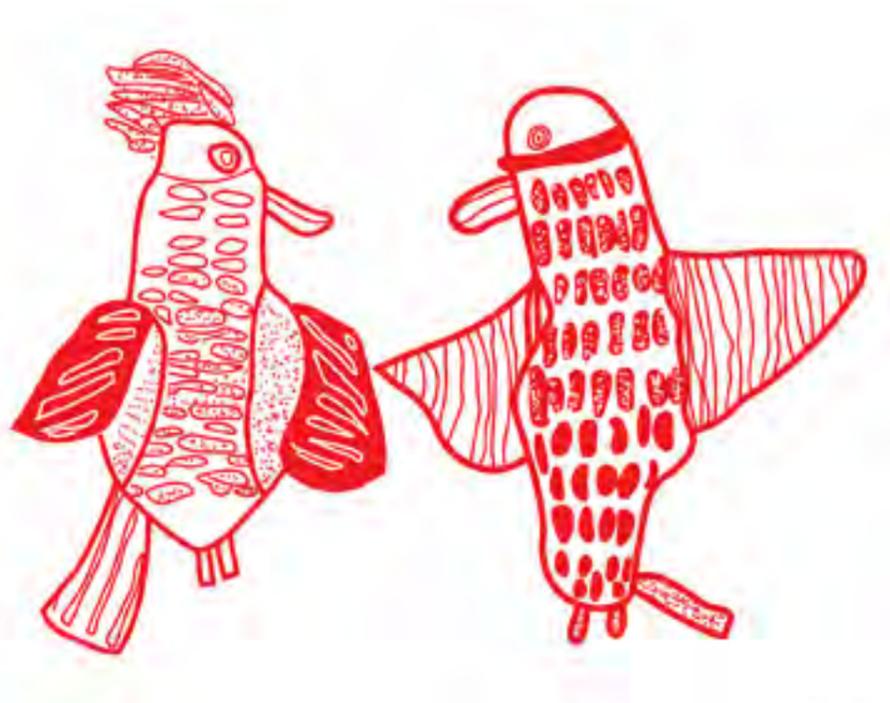

Studio A's Decorative Sculpture Team produced an elaborate range of paper feather sculptures for Westpac's Changemakers Summit at Barangaroo. The sculptures symbolised the Summit's emphasis on creativity, transformation and evolution. The works also inspired an interactive workshop where changemaker attendees reflected on new habits to foster their own growth.

Dancing Together with UTS

Inspired by Studio A's online movement program, from June 2020 UTS Gallery partnered with Studio A to present Dancing Together, a participatory online program with a simple mission; to make you feel good while you're staying at home.

Studio A is more than a place to make art; it is a social and familial space to find connection, receive support and make meaning. UTS wanted to share this sense of community and culture with the public and put out an open call to individuals who wanted to join in a daily dance session with Studio A artists.

Participants were invited to choose their favorite song and dance with a select group of artists (Emily Crockford, Meagan Pelham and Victoria Atkinson), led by Studio A artists-in-residence Harriet Body and Rosie Deacon.

"A totally fabulous initiative and I absolutely loved it, and meeting all the lovely and talented artists!!! I'd love to see this become a regular event in the longer term. So great to connect people and have some fun too."

- Feedback from a Dancing Together participant

Stockland Shopping Centres

Stockland reached out to Studio A about licensing a number of artworks to bring colour and personality to their shopping centres, while also creating a greater connection of people to place. Their desire was to create a more inclusive culture within their community by showcasing selected artists across various in-centre hoardings and provide a platform to commercialise their creativity.

The artworks, which were selected from the Studio A collection, were printed in large format and used to enhance empty shop fronts between leases. The display included information and a photograph of the featured artist. Lisa Scott's painting Two Love Birds is one of the artworks licensed by Stockland for their centres nationwide. This placement was located at the Stockland Shopping Centre in Balgowlah, NSW.

Red Room Poetry

Red Room Poetry makes poetry in meaningful ways. Past/Present Pets was a collaborative project with Red Room and Studio A honouring the life force of animals through a body of poetic and visual work that captures the spirit of companionship.

Fourteen Studio A artists were matched with six Red Room poet mentors to create a series of poems to accompany artworks inspired by pets – past, present, fantastic and future – reflecting on their role in our personal, social and sacred worlds. The Red Room Poetry poets, Robin M. Eames, Rozanna Lilley, Johanna Featherstone, Gareth Jenkins, David Stavanger and Tamryn Bennett, worked one-on-one via Zoom with Studio A artists illuminating pathways to expand their creative practice.

The final poems and artworks were published by Red Room Poetry.

Holly

She was very cheeky and clever

a little naughty as well

She used to go to our neighbour Ted's place

It was always dark inside

even in the daytime

Ted sat on the front verandah simple wooden

He was tall and thin

he blew smoke rings from his pipe

Holly went there to get a sausage always raw

Like my feelings

when I went back to Bright

Warm and fuzzy

and a little sad too

“Working with the artists at Studio A introduced me to radical imaginations and courageous hearts that challenged what a poem could be and might mean to the reader and to the creator.”

Cement Fondu: Art Store

Following on from our consistent exhibiting partnership with Cement Fondu, in 2019 Studio A was invited to provide a collection of design product and original artwork for Cement Fondu's artist-run art store. Countless works and merchandise have been sold via the store, resulting in additional income and patronage for our artists.

Studio A x Corban & Blair

In 2019 Studio A continued its partnership with designers/manufacturers, Corban & Blair. Artists produced unique designs on Corban & Blair products, creating a bespoke range of lifestyle items adorned with original artwork. The individual pieces are created from products that Corban & Blair want to give a new life: to create authenticity, inspiration and a new narrative that extends a product's life or creates a completely new cultural artefact.

Studio A artworks were also licensed to be used as fabric linings in a product range including luggage tags, coin purses, journals and hold-alls. Information regarding the commissioned artist and their practice is included with these products. Corban & Blair collaborate with artists, designers and artisans to create products that are unique, authentic, and that tell Australian stories.

Workshops

Public engagement is a key part of Studio A's creative program. Workshops foster and build creativity in the community and workplace, all while offering engaged employment opportunities to artists with intellectual disability.

- Atlassian artist-in-residence workshop series. Commissioned to host creative workshops for staff each week at the Atlassian offices in Sydney, this series was kicked off by Meagan Pelham but unfortunately cut short due to COVID-19.

- North Sydney Children's Festival. Articulated puppet workshop led by Lauren Kerjan and Catherine McGuinness.

- home workshop with Macarthur Anglican School Camden led by Meagan Pelham.

"(The workshop) encouraged me to go outside my comfort zone with creating with no judgement."

- Macarthur Anglican School student

- Superhero Alter Egos with Greg Sindel at the Coal Loader International Day of People with Disability

- Feather making creative workshop for Museum of Contemporary Art's Bella Plus Connect program led by Lauren Kerjan and Catherine McGuinness.

"The integrity of working with Studio A artists created positive experiences for both our audiences and staff. This has an on-going positive and supportive influence on how we continue to create opportunity for artists with disability to be engaged with our creative learning programs and connect our audience with the work of artists with disability."

- Rachel Ireland Museum of Contemporary Art, Studio A at the Bella Connect Program

Australasian Society for Intellectual Disability Conference

Presentation by Lisa Scott and Chloe Watfern
Hilton, Adelaide, November 2019

In November 2019 Lisa Scott and UNSW PhD student Chloe Watfern travelled to Adelaide for the ASID - Australasian Society for Intellectual Disability Conference.

The two delivered a presentation titled "Taking control through writing and making art", which focused on Lisa's work, primarily a textile artwork hand embroidered with her words. Lisa and Chloe shared their thoughts and research on what artwork means to people with intellectual disability and to the audiences who view it.

"Hi my name is Lisa Scott. I'm an artist. My art is a talent. It is also an experience that I can share with other people."

Presentation to Department of Premier and Cabinet

Thom Roberts and Emily Crockford
November 2019

To celebrate International Day of People with Disability 2019, Thom Roberts and Emily Crockford were invited to present at the NSW Department of Premier and Cabinet (DPC). Representing Studio A alongside our Artistic Director/CEO Gabrielle Mordy, Thom and Emily were also joined by DPC Secretary Tim Reardon. After screening their episodes from the Studio A ABC Art Bites series, the two shared their stories and work as an introduction to DPC of the disability arts sector.

COVID Adaptation

In March 2020 Studio A transformed its centre based art studio into a remote working model in the space of one week. We adjusted our service delivery to ensure we were operating in line with the NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission guidelines for adjusting supports and reducing infection risk during COVID-19.

Studio A worked with each artist and family to design bespoke creative programs to ensure artists were safe and engaged. Programs were delivered digitally, some artists working via Zoom, whilst others practiced from home studios with staff providing 1:1 visits. A very reduced number worked at Studio A to ensure social distancing measures were complied with, and Studio A staff not necessary for supporting artists at Studio A's premises worked from home.

To preserve morale, from March 2020 all Studio A artists and staff met for a conference call via Zoom at 9.30am and 3pm daily. This instilled a sense of structure and community between our artists. Guest artists were recruited to lead specialised creative projects, which provided employment to self employed artists who had overnight lost projects and income. Textile artist Paula do Prado created a collaborative textile work via postal exchange with Studio A artist Katrina Brennan (based in Orange); and performance artists Harriet Body and Rosie Deacon lead daily movement sessions with six Studio A artists. The daily dance helped Studio A artists stay connected and active while working remotely.

The Zoom dance and convos with the artists has been just so wonderful. I find it a really uplifting experience and I know the artists do too...This project has only run for a week but is already touching souls and sparking creativity within the community!! Exciting stuff!

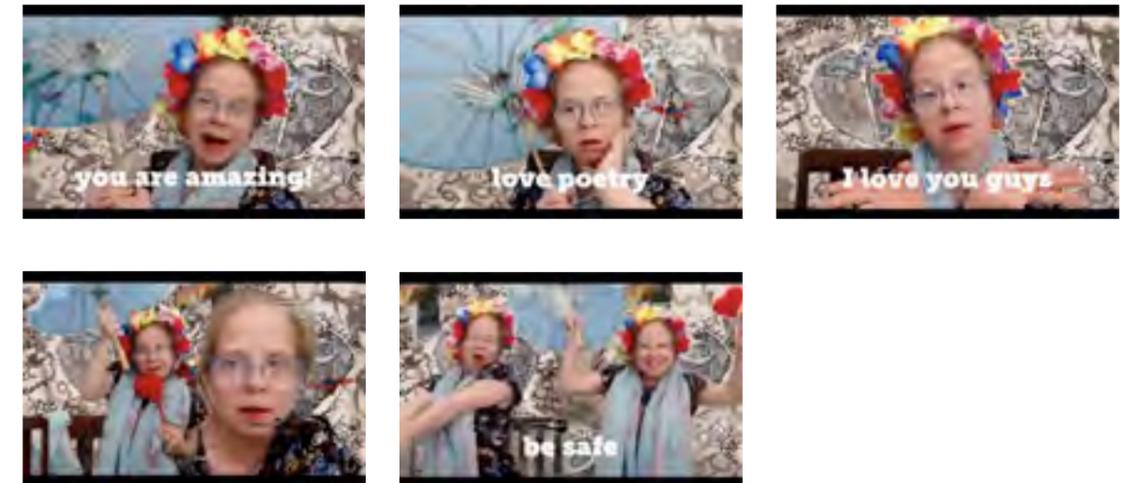

- Harriet Body, Performance Artist

The programme is working really well, Emmy is really loving Zoom!!! I asked her whether she would like to be involved with the digital - answer was "cool". Have a happy weekend - thank you for all your initiatives and creativity - who would have thought our way of life could change so much. Take care, Lots of love, Sue and Emmy.

- Sue Crockford, Emily Crockford's mother

Connecting with our audiences

Studio A focused on delivering an engaging, creative and connected artistic program during COVID-19. A program that connected our artists and audiences during this time of isolation. Two key initiatives were Studio A online exhibitions, curated by Studio A's Collection Coordinator Lise Anderson, and Studio A 'Covid Tales', a series of videos produced by Studio A artists in response to the pandemic. The first two online exhibitions - Annette Galstaun : Flights of Fantasy, Whimsical Dreams & Fairytales (May 2020) and Catherine McGuiness: Love and Cockadoos (June 2020) - received over 200 page views and prompted sales.

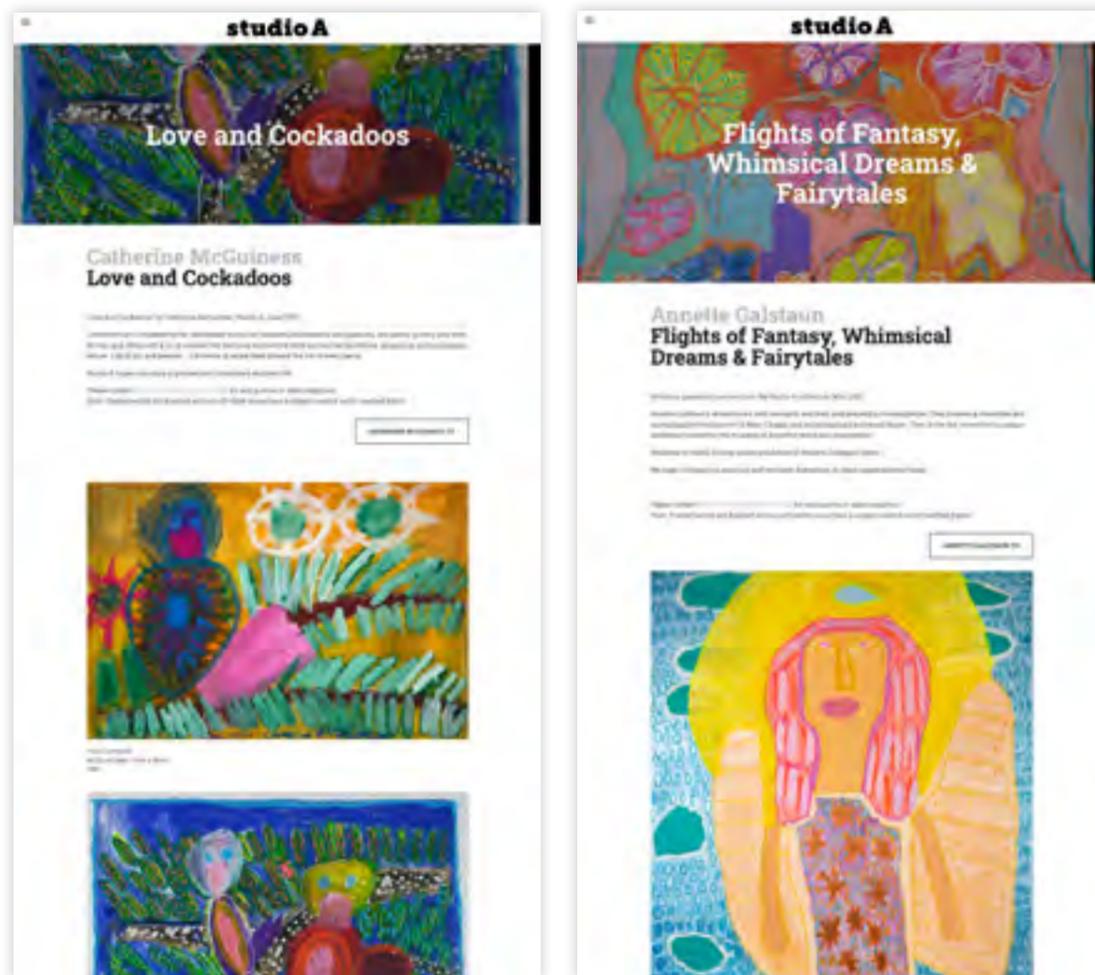

The real star of the program were the Covid Tales: Greg Sindel's Attack of the Virus King, which offered Greg Sindel's unique perspective and personal story of the pandemic, and Meagan Pelham's Message on Love and Life, an outpouring of comfort and words of affirmation to her studio colleagues, and anyone feeling lonely in the pandemic. "Beautiful supermodel" she declares in the opening, "you are amazing!... You are wonderful wonderful wonderful artists!"

You have done a really fantastic job in remodelling the studio's ability to cater for the artists and staff in the Covid-19 world and we really appreciate it. Regards - Peter, Sharyn and Greg.

- Greg Sindel's family

Meagan Pelham, Home Love Haven Sorceress and Studio A artist

Studio A utilised social media to action a series of audience engagement initiatives. This kick started with Meagan Pelham's Home Love Haven Sorceress project that offered romantic musings to survive isolation, Meagan invited people to request her advice on 'how to create romance from a distance'. Studio A received a stream of requests and Meagan busily responded. Her letters and decorated envelopes were posted to all recipients.

"♥♥ Meagan ♥♥♥♥♥ we feel your love from here!"

- Elise Slater, Live Softly

"Seeing your posts always makes me happy. Thank you."

- @daryle_shefloats

New design products

Inspired by the popularity of previous Studio A merchandise we expanded our range of tote bag and notebook designs. Thom Roberts' popular 'Tweety the Fake Train Bird' portrait exhibited in The National 2019 can now be purchased on the cover of an original Studio A notebook. Meagan Pelham's love poetry is available to adorn your own paper journal. Or you can select Annette Galstaun's colourful chattering jungle birds perched in Emily Crockford's lush greenery to get you writing and drawing.

Skye Saxon launched her first tote bag with her distinctive text and phrase 'What ever goes'. Scrawled in her raw graphic style Skye's slogan seemingly encompasses her own approach to art making.

Income

Where our funding came from in FY20

Fundraising

Donations have increased 34% on FY19 and we sincerely thank all our donors for their generous contributions. Donations are critical to the success of our artists.

Grants

Create NSW is the main contributor of grants for Studio A. Income from Create NSW increased to $90k in FY20 (FY19: $80k).

Artist Fees

Artist fees have continued to be strong in FY20, reflecting the development of Studio A artists. Continuing growth in artist fees is key to the success of Studio A as a social enterprise.

Artwork / Merchandise Sales

Artwork and merchandise sales have more than doubled between FY19 and FY20 which is testament to the development of our artists and the value placed on Studio A creations in the community.

NDIS Funding

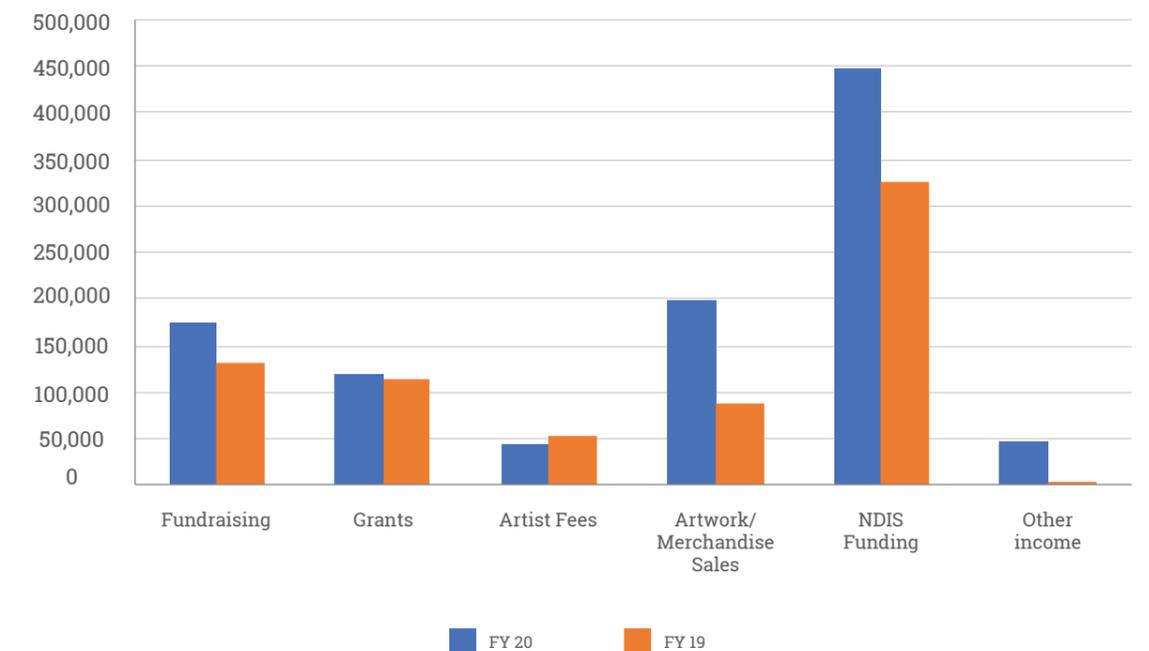

This includes member funding, one on one funding and community access income received from the NDIS on behalf of artists. The increase in NDIS income is due to artists attending increased hours, some with a 1:1 staff ratio.

Other

Other income has increased due to Federal Government COVID-19 support (JobKeeper)

Expenditure

How our funding was used in FY20

Administration

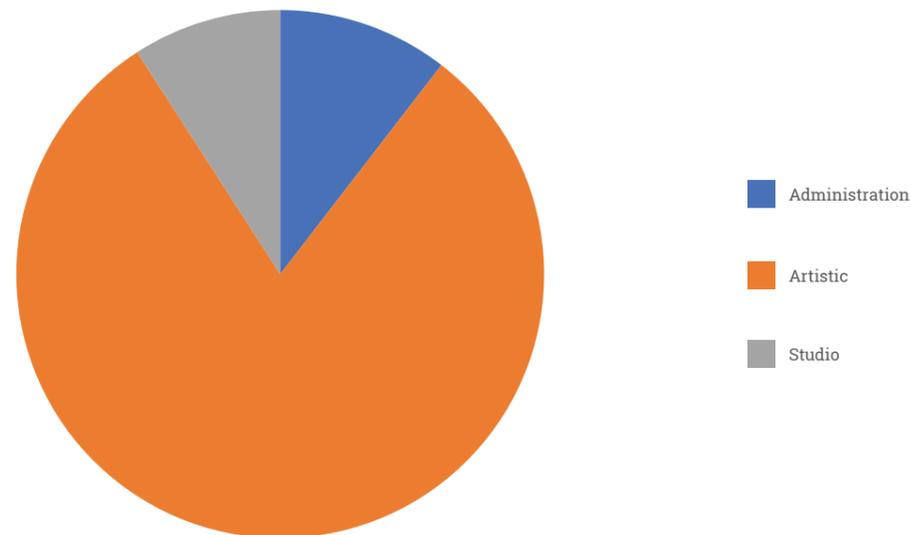

Administration costs are kept low at Studio A and represent just 10% of overall expenditure. This includes travel/fuel costs, accounting, audit fees and insurances.

Artistic

Artistic expenses are at the core of what we do and make up the bulk of Studio A expenditure. This includes payments to our artists, art consumables, framing/printing, artistic staff salaries and guest artist costs.

Studio

This is the cost of 'keeping the lights on' at our Crows Nest studio and includes rent, cleaning, IT support and depreciation.
