Sagewood, a Life Care Services-managed community in Phoenix, is undergoing an expansion project that will add 101 independent living apartment homes and other spaces to the community.

The $100 million second phase will include one- and two-bedroom apartment homes, an 18-hole golf putting course, new and expanded dining venues, card rooms and new administrative offices.

All of the new residences will have patios or balconies and range from approximately 870 to 2,350 square feet. Residents can move in after a one-time entrance fee of $440,000.

Architect Todd & Associates designed the second phase, with construction from The Weitz Company. If all goes according to plan, the new expansion will open in 2020.
