The 2004-05 Season Outlook

Eight times in Steve Fisher's remarkable coaching career he has returned at least three starters off a team he coached the previous season. And all eight times he has taken those teams to the postseason. That's just one reason that Aztec fans look at the four returning starters and nine returning letterwinners and believe that San Diego State can return to the postseason for the third time in four seasons.

t would be very easy for San Diego State head basketball coach Steve Fisher to rest on his accomplishments. He could survey past achievements and know that his legacy would be secure and his career would be one that many coaches would envy and hope to emulate.

There is, however, one problem with that notion. Fisher is a man who has been to the top of the mountain, as well as to the top of the Mountain West. He is also blessed with an extraordinary amount of energy and drive. And there is, of course, the time-tested theory that reaching the promised land only makes one more driven to reach it again.

Steve Fisher is entering his sixth season at San Diego State. He appears to be on the verge of signing the best recruiting class in the history of the school. He may be on the verge of taking the program to heights never before dreamed of on Montezuma Mesa. And the accomplishments during his first five years on campus are almost too numerous to mention but well documented.

And yet, somewhere between the past accomplishments and future glories sit the 2004-2005 Aztecs. It is a team with fifth-year seniors, and rising sophomore stars. It is a team with interchangeable parts and yet some very defined roles. It is a squad that expects to win and yet one that will face one of the more challenging schedules in the school's history.

And it is a team very anxious to write the next chapter in San Diego State's basketball revival after a season that showed just how close the Aztecs have come to the elite programs in the league.

The 2003-2004 season was an exhausting ride for San Diego State. The Aztecs were never overmatched in league play but finished with a 5-9 Mountain West record. Steve Fisher has guided the Aztecs to 51 victories and two postseason appearances in the last three seasons. The 51 wins are the highest three-year total for San Diego State in 19 years.

Postseason Play, Guaranteed

Steve Fisher has guided every team in which he returned at least three starters off a squad he coached the previous season, to postseason play. That bodes well for the Aztecs who return three starters Chris Walton, Travis Hanour and Marcus Slaughter and a fourth if you count Wesley Stokes. Below is a look at the phenomenal success Fisher has enjoyed when returning three or more starters, including a perfect 8-for-8 mark taking those teams to postseason play.

Starters Re	turning	Years	Times	Avg. W	NCAA	NIT	none
Four	90, 92, 94	1 , 97, 02	5	23.4	4	1	0
Three		95, 03	2	16.5	1	1	0
When Retu	arning 3 or 1	More Star	ters 8	22.6	6	2	0

The numbers are equally good when factoring in the nine letterwinners San Diego State returns in 2004-05 season. Fisher has guided all five teams he has coached, returning at least eight letterwinners from a squad he coached the preceding season, to postseason play, including four trips to the NCAA Tournament.

Letterwinners Returning	Times	Avg. W	NCAA	NIT	none
11	2	28.0	2	0	0
10	none
9	1	14.0	0	1	0
8	2	22.0	2	0	0
When Returning At Least
Eight Letterwinners	5	22.8	4	1	0

As a freshman in 2003-04, Marcus Slaughter ranked among the Mountain West Conference leaders in five statistical categories.

Slaughter House

Sophomore forward Marcus Slaughter enjoyed one of the best freshman seasons in San Diego State history. Among Aztec freshmen all-time, Slaughter was third in rebounding, third in rebound average, fourth in rebound average, fifth in field goal percentage, sixth in blocked shots and seventh in steals. However, most impressive may be where Slaughter ranks among Steve Fisher-coached freshmen. The coach, whose name is forever linked to successful first-year players, has coached some tremendously talented freshmen, but as one can see below, Marcus Slaughter held his own against some of the biggest names in basketball.

Season Outlook

Brandon Heath caught the attention of not only Aztec fans but also the media, as he averaged 13.8 points and earned all-MWC honors as a freshman in 2003-04. His 413 points last season were the fourth highest by a Steve Fisher-coached freshman.

San Diego State lost four road games by four points or less, or in overtime. And the final game of the season, against Utah in the first round of the Mountain West Tournament, the Aztecs held, and lost, a late lead.

It just may be time for those experiences to pay off.

Gone from last year's squad is Aerick Sanders. He wrapped up his career as one of the most popular and productive Aztecs ever. And replacing his teamhigh 16.1 points and team-high 9.8 rebounds will be the job of everyone.

"We return a core group of seniors, which is always good," Fisher said. "But we lost the heart and soul of our team in Aerick Sanders. But I like what we have."

This is a Fisher team. It is the type of team he likes to coach. It is a team that fits his trademark.

"I like the versatility of being able to put different combinations of people on the floor," the head coach said. "It can be predicated on whose playing well, or whom you are playing. We have that with this team. I don't care to label players as a small forward or shooting guard. I like having the ability to mix and match." The Aztecs have older players, such as battle-tested Chris Walton, Chris Manker and Tommy Johnson. They have two of the league's up-and-coming stars in sophomores Brandon Heath and Marcus Slaughter. There is steady guard John Sharper, the athletic Trimaine Davis and Big 12-tested Wesley Stokes.

"We have some experience so that when we take that conference road trip, these players won't be walking into an arena for the first time."

There is a lot to mix and match. It looks like a Steve Fisher team.

"Brandon and Marcus were two of the best freshmen around," Fisher said. "This year we expect them to be two of the best players around."

San Diego State returns three fulltime starters in Brandon Heath, Chris Walton and Marcus Slaughter. Completing the starting five could be fun, as well as interesting. And yet, there is very little urgency in naming a starting five. SDSU is versatile and talented.

The following is a position-by-position breakdown of the Aztecs as they head into the 2004-2005 season.

Center

The slender tower of steel that roamed the paint for San Diego State for four years has departed. The loss of Aerick Sanders and his 16.1 points and 9.8 rebounds per game will be hard to replace. He was an intangible player. He did the big things, he did the little things and he did them at full speed. And he led last year's Aztecs in scoring, rebounding blocked shots and fieldgoal percentage.

So the adjustments for the Aztecs are two-fold. San Diego State must replace the stats and leadership of Sanders, who was also a captain. And it must replace a man in the middle who stood all of 6-8. What San Diego State loses with the departure of Sanders, could possibly be countered by sheer bulk. For the first time since Mike Mackell departed Montezuma Mesa, the Aztecs have a big, physical presence in the paint in the form of junior-college transfer Mohamed Camara. He is the space eater the Aztecs have been missing in a conference that seems to grow vertically by the second.

"He is a legitimate center," Fisher said of the newcomer. "We are very anxious to see what he can do for us inside."

Camara was an early commitment to St. John's. However, the Aztecs were able to land him in the spring signing period. He arrives on campus from Riverside Community College and could nail down a starting spot early.

"He brings us what you don't teach: big-time size and strength," Fisher said. "He is a legitimate 6-10, and 265 pounds. He is strong and athletic. We need to help him become a basketball player. He could give us something we didn't have last year and that is a real center. Aerick was a center based on determination and need. Mohamed is a natural low-post player."

Seven-foot center Chris Manker can also bang down low or cause a mismatch by forcing larger players outside to protect against his surprising range. Manker knocked down 20 three-pointers a year ago and was second on the squad with his 35.7 shooting percentage from beyond the arc.

The two big men might provide an interesting combo in the middle. With Manker's ability to move out to the wing, there might be ample opportunity for both players to be on the court at the same time.

Senior and team captain Chris Walton is a hybrid of the two. He can bang Forward Chris Walton, who will serve as the team captain in 2004-05, brings a wealth of experience into his senior season. The San Diego native has played in 91 career games and made 32 starts. Walton needs to play in just three more Aztec victories to move into the Division I era top 10 victories list.

Trimaine Davis has endeared himself to Aztec fans through his hardworking, blue-collar approach to basketball as well as his high-flying monster dunks like this one, which clinched the Aztecs' 65-61 victory over Brigham Young last season.

down low at 6-8 and he can move out onto a wing and even into the backcourt if needed.

All in all, the Aztecs look to be solid at center with lots of options.

Forward

SDSU is loaded at this position, even if you divide the front line into the traditional power forward and small-forward positions.

Chris Walton is back as a fifth-year senior after a junior season in which his numbers jumped in every area. Walton averaged 8.7 points and 4.9 boards per game last year but he is a player in which the numbers fail to tell the tale. He had 69 assists to rank second on the team in that category. He is a player that has the ability to make those on the court with him better.

"Chris is improved in all phases, on and off the court," Fisher said of the player who was in his first fall recruiting class. "He is the leader of this team and he is important to us in a lot of ways."

"I don't know if Chris is a three or four, in basketball terms," Fisher said. "He is one of the cornerstones of our team and we can use him in a lot of ways.

Walton is a lock in the starting lineup. And across the way at the other forward spot is likely to be Marcus Slaughter. He is on the fast track to stardom after earning honorable mention all-league honors in his rookie season. Of the 29 Mountain West players to earn all-conference accolades, only four were freshmen with Slaughter and teammate Brandon Heath leading the way. Among Steve Fisher-coached freshmen, only Chris Webber and Juwan Howard posted higher rebounding numbers than Slaughter's 204 boards (6.8 per game) last season.

From Feb. 1 through the rest of the season, Slaughter had a higher rebounding average than Aerick

Sanders, who ended his career as SDSU's fifth all-time leading rebounder.

"I hope Marcus inherits some of Aerick's rebounds," Fisher said. "Marcus came in at 195 and now he weighs 223 pounds. That should help him in every phase of his game. He can be an exceptional rebounder. His offensive game grew last year and he should be a very good outside-inside player for us."

The guy who could play both sides of the floor is Manker. He has the size and shooting touch to roam all over the front line

The term power forward was invented for Trimaine Davis, a jumping junior who is probably the best pure athlete in an Aztec uniform. He is the school's best leaper, can bring the crowd to its feet for a variety of reasons and is high energy.

"Trimaine has been working and waiting for his chance and this season he is going to get that chance," Fisher said

Another player that everyone will be watching is Travis Hanour. The senior has battled injury problems since his arrival from the University of Arizona, but he is an excellent shooter, athletic and would be a major force in the Mountain West Conference on many fronts.

Senior Tommy Johnson has made many big plays during his Aztec career and he is capable of sliding into frontline action and causing his own set of matchup problems.

A newcomer up front who will be looking to make an impact is Tim McGrath, a product of Santa Monica High School. He is a wing player and a seven-foot high jumper. Freshman Chris Lamb is a good shooter with a big upside and the coaching staff loves his toughness.

Jared Ines could be a contributor along the front line as well. He is aggressive and strong and will battle for inside opportunities.

Point Guard

In the absence of Wesley Stokes for the first semester, SDSU will be breaking in a new point guard. The upside of that is that there are plenty of options.

Junior John Sharper and sophomore Brandon Heath can and have manned the position. Sharper is among the best outside shooters on the team and Heath is a player who loves to defend, run and lead.

Sharper made five starts last season and has hit 41 percent of his threeJohn Sharper has proven to be an effective player at both guard positions. Sharper has connected on INTRODUCTIO 41.1 percent of his career three-point field goal attempts, while averaging just one turnover every 24.4

pointers during his career. He is also safe with the ball, having committed just 19 turnovers in 520 minutes of play last season. Sharper will also be seen at the shooting guard, where he has been a contributor throughout the last two years.

> Fisher has a simple label for Brandon Heath: winner. As a freshman he became a team leader and craves the big shot down the stretch. His 413 points last year represent the second best freshman total in Aztec history. But what Heath provides most of all is flexibility. He will likely see time at both guard spots all season. Another player that will get

"Matt Thomas is a very skilled ball-handling point guard with size. He will fight, out of the gate, for an opportunity to play point guard."

Tyler Smith, another newcomer, is coming off a heavily-decorated prep career in Orange County (Calif).

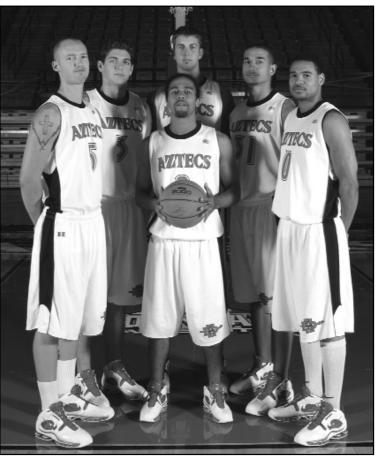

Shooting Guard

Like the forward position, the Aztecs like their candidates at shooting guard. Heath and his 13.8-point average lead the way. He started all but four games last season and finished second on the team in scoring and steals and finished third in assists.

"Brandon is, to me, a poster child for doing things the right way," Fisher said. "He has been as tenacious with his academics as he has been with his basketball and we are extremely proud of him in both areas."

> "A year ago he was an outstanding defender and a streak scorer," the coach added. "This year we just need more consistency. He finds ways to win. He has no fear. He will play multiple positions on the perimetor."

> > A senior in the backcourt is Tommy Johnson. He has been around the program, played a lot of minutes and has been in the starting five at various times in his

"Tommy has made some big plays for us, almost from the very beginning of his career," Fisher said. "He is another guy not afraid of making a play down the stretch. He's not really affected by any environment."

Johnson will see plenty of playing time at various places on the court. He can play several positions and would not be a surprise to see him come off the bench and play "starter" minutes. He has had a history of making a quick impact when coming off the Aztec bench.

"Tommy brings athleticism, toughness," Fisher said. "Now, we need his senior season to be one of consistency.

Hanour will also be a candidate at the shooting guard or in a three-guard lineup.

Another option could be Shawn Weinstein, is a redshirt freshman who is an exceptional shooter. He has worked hard on developing his strength and ball skills.

The Schedule

The Aztecs' non-conference schedule seems to be elevated every year and the 2004-05 slate is full of challenges.

"We have an extremely challenging non-conference schedule, including Cal, San Diego, Saint Mary's and Providence College," Fisher said. "The tough road tests in November and December will be at Washington, Iowa State and our home and home with UC Santa Barbara. Those teams should help prepare us for what we will see in the Mountain West Conference.

"Our league is highly regarded on every front," Fisher said. "We lose a Rick Majerus and add a Lon Kruger. No other conference in America is a closely balanced as ours. Every team had a winning home record in conference play. That's amazing. Life on the road is almost impossible in this league."

Preseason Notes

Returning to the Postseason

Given Steve Fisher's track record, San Diego State's prospects of returning to the postseason for a third time in four seasons appears to be good. In his 12 full seasons, Steve Fisher has returned at least three starters off a squad he coached the previous season eight times. He has guided all eight of those teams to postseason play, including six of those squads to the NCAA Tournament. Those eight teams have combined to post a 20-5 record in postseason play, including two appearances in the NCAA Tournament championship game (1991 and 1992) and a championship in the NIT (1996).

- Some additional notes on Steve Fisher's success when returning at least three starters off a team he has coached.
- ▶ Is 8-for-8 in leading his team to the postseason. Six times he has guided a team to the NCAA Tournament.
- ▶ Has won at least one postseason game in six of those eight seasons and at least two games in five of those eight postseasons.
- Averaged 22.6 wins in those eight seasons. In six of the eight years his teams have won at least 21 games. Below is a look at Fisher's magic when returning at least three starters from his previous squad.

Most of the pre-season magazines have picked the Aztecs to finish in the lower half of the Mountain West Conference standings and the MWC poll was no exception, picking the Aztecs to finish seventh; however, a pretty strong case can be made that San Diego State will have a successful 2004-05 season.

▶ San Diego State returns four starters and nine letterwinners (includes Travis Hanour who sat out last season due to injuries) from the 2003-04 season. The Aztecs return eight of their top nine scores from last season.

▶ Steve Fisher is 8-for-8 in his career in taking teams to the postseason when returning at least three starters off a team he coached the previous season. Included in those eight postseason trips are six NCAA Tournament berths and an average total of 22.6 wins. The last time a Steve Fisher coached team returned four starters off a team he coached was 2001-02, when Fisher guided the Aztecs to their first NCAA Tournament appearance since 1985. Twice in his career, Fisher has returned at least three starters and at least nine letterwinners off a team he coached, both seasons he has led his team to the NCAA Tournament, posting a collective 56-14 record.

▶ San Diego State returns 77.0 percent of points, 74.2 percent of field goals, 99.4 percent of three-point field goals, 78.0 percent of free throws, 68.6 percent of rebounds, 91.3 percent of assists, 54.9 percent of blocked shots, 85.8 percent of steals and 81.9 percent of minutes from the 2003-04 season.

▶ The 2004-05 SDSU roster has played 538 games and made 161 starts. Nine players on the Aztec roster have played in at least 30 college games and five players have made at least 18 college starts. Last season, the Aztec roster (not counting Travis Hanour's total because he missed the season due to injury) entered the campaign with a total of 407 games and 72 starts. In 2002-03 when San Diego State advanced to the second round of the postseason NIT, the Aztecs entered the campaign with 413 games and 152 starts of experience. In 2001-02 when the Aztecs claimed the Mountain West Conference championship and advanced to the NCAA Tournament, San Diego State entered the season with 370 games and 194 starts.

San Diego State was not that far away last season from making their third consecutive postseason appearance. Although the Aztecs finished 14-16 overall, they lost three games they led with 59 seconds left, lost six games that were a one possession game with 25 seconds or less remaining and lost seven games when they led with 13:48 or less remaining in regulation. Part of that can be explained by the fact that SDSU had just one scholarship senior (Aerick Sanders).

▶ San Diego State returns three players that earned all-Mountain West Conference recognition last season. Senior guard Wesley Stokes, sophomore guard Brandon Heath and sophomore forward Marcus Slaughter are back for SDSU this season. This marks the first time in school history that three all-league performers return from an Aztec team. In fact, in the Mountain West Conference era, San Diego State has never returned two all-MWC performers the following season (2000-01 (0); 2001-02 (0); 2002-03 (1) Tony Bland; 2003-04 (0); 2004-05 (3) Brandon Heath, Marcus Slaughter, Wesley Stokes).

▶ San Diego State has two of the best underclassmen not only in the league, but also in the country in Brandon Heath and Marcus Slaughter. The duo was two of only four freshmen to earn all league recognition last season. Heath and Slaughter combined to score 650 points and pull down 284 rebounds in their inaugural season.

▶ Another example of the stability of the Aztec program can be found by the number of players that have signed with San Diego State out of the prep ranks. Of San Diego State's 16-player roster, three are Division I transfers (Travis Hanour, Chris Manker and Wesley Stokes), two junior college players (Mohamed Camara and walk-on Jared Ines) and 11 players who signed with SDSU directly out of high school. Of the five newcomers, four signed with the Aztecs out of high school.
