Sulci protectors are ideal for straightening, mending and shaping the side edges of the nail and for the cushioning the nail against irritation or inflammation from the nail wall. They offer a distinct advantage over packing, especially for ingrown toenails.

They can be left in place for up to eight weeks (Must be refixed after four weeks) The splints do not just provide a cushion, they also have the effect of maintaining the normal width and shape of the nail at the free edge. That prevents the changes to the nail bed, protrusion of the nail wall and the resulting deformities and growth disorders of the nail.

Sulci protectors are available in three different sizes. Sulci protectors can be positioned using tweezers or a sulci injector. Acrytensil is the ideal fixative for the protector.

With ingrown toenails, the side edge of the nail often has sharp edges or spikes that press deep into the fold causing a painful inflammatory reaction.

The edge of the nail is first straightened and smoothed with the help of a tool such as a file.

Care and Maintenance of surgical instruments

Modern decontamination techniques tend to be far more aggressive than those previously employed and can greatly reduce the life of an instrument if not regularly and thoroughly cleaned and lubricated.

Pre-Soak

Instruments contaminated with blood and tissue debris should not be allowed to dry prior to cleaning and autoclaving, but pre soaked with a suitable additive. This will help to prevent the debris adhering to and staining the instrument.

Hand Scrubbing & Ultrasonic Cleaning

Instruments should be rinsed then scrubbed with an autoclavable cleaning brush before ultrasonically cleaning and the further rinsing and drying of the instrument. At this point it should be inspected and any remaining debris removed. Ensure the joints and hinges are opened during the cleaning process.

Sterilisation/Autoclaving

Steam sterilisation in an autoclave is the only recommended method for use in podiatry.

Lubrication

All jointed and hinged instruments should be lubricated with a proprietary surgical instrument lubricant. General oils and anti seizing agents are not suitable and their use could result in damage to sterilisation equipment.

Where available an effective drying cycle should be employed following the sterilisation cycle or at the very least the instrument immediately removed to dry whilst hot.

Under no circumstances should instruments be left in a damp autoclave for any period of time following sterilisation. Different metals should not be mixed and non stainless steels are not suitable for autoclaving.

Damaged and rusting instruments could leave deposits on other instruments and for that reason should be disposed of and not autoclaved.

The majority of joint malfunction can be traced to poor cleaning and lubrication. Damage to instruments arising from poor maintenance and neglect will not be covered within the warranty provided.

Hi-Tech Oil Pen 7ml Tip

Ultrasonic Cleaners

For effective sterilisation and to prevent damage to your autoclave, all instruments should be cleaned before autoclaving. When high frequency sound waves are passed through a cleaning fluid such as water with a suitable detergent additive, many millions of microscopic bubbles form and collapse. The bubbles are forced under their own collapse pressure into crevices where fluid can penetrate leaving it totally clean and free of hidden soils.

Hadewe Chiropody Drills

All our drills are sent direct from our engineer, who can offer a 2 year warranty subject to an annual service

Hadewe Spray Technology

Hadewe Spray Technology makes it possible to use demineralised water to produce a fine mist to aid the comfort and cleanliness of both patient and podiatrist during procedures. Using a mist helps reduce airborne dust and particulates through capturing them and forming an easily cleanable and controllable residue. The mist is controllable and can be tweaked to produce the perfect amount of water to control the residue from a procedure.

Caring For a Spray Drill

Ensuring proper working practise with a spray drill is very important for patient, chiropodist and the spray drill itself. Using only distilled or de-ionised water helps prevent build up within the spray drill, ensuring that your spray drill works perfectly for years to come. We do not recommend adding any alcohol based additive to the spray water as these can be harmful to the patients and chiropodists skin. It is also good practise to make sure the water resevoir is filled up to at least 3/4 full before starting a procedure and to also ensure to secure the lid of the resevoir tightly, this helps maintain pressure within the system providing a fine and even spray.

Hadewe SPR4 Waterspray Drill

The SPR3 unit has been upgraded to provide a fine atomising spray technique which allows working without an alcohol additive which protects the patient and especially the user in long hours of continuous use.

Hadewe Suction Technology

Hadewe Suction Technology is powerful and efficient. Most Hadewe handpieces have a side suction providing a steady suction around the bur. Suction works to bring any debris away from the patient and help prevent airborne particulates and spores from leaving the problem areas.

Caring For a Suction Drill

In order to make sure your suction drill maintains a strong and even pull it is very important to regularly change your filter bags. Clogged filter bags can greatly reduce the suction produced from the handpiece through blocking the air way to the nozzle of the drill. This also helps keep your drill hygienic and clean.
