

Barnaby Bear's African Diary.

I flew to Africa on this plane.

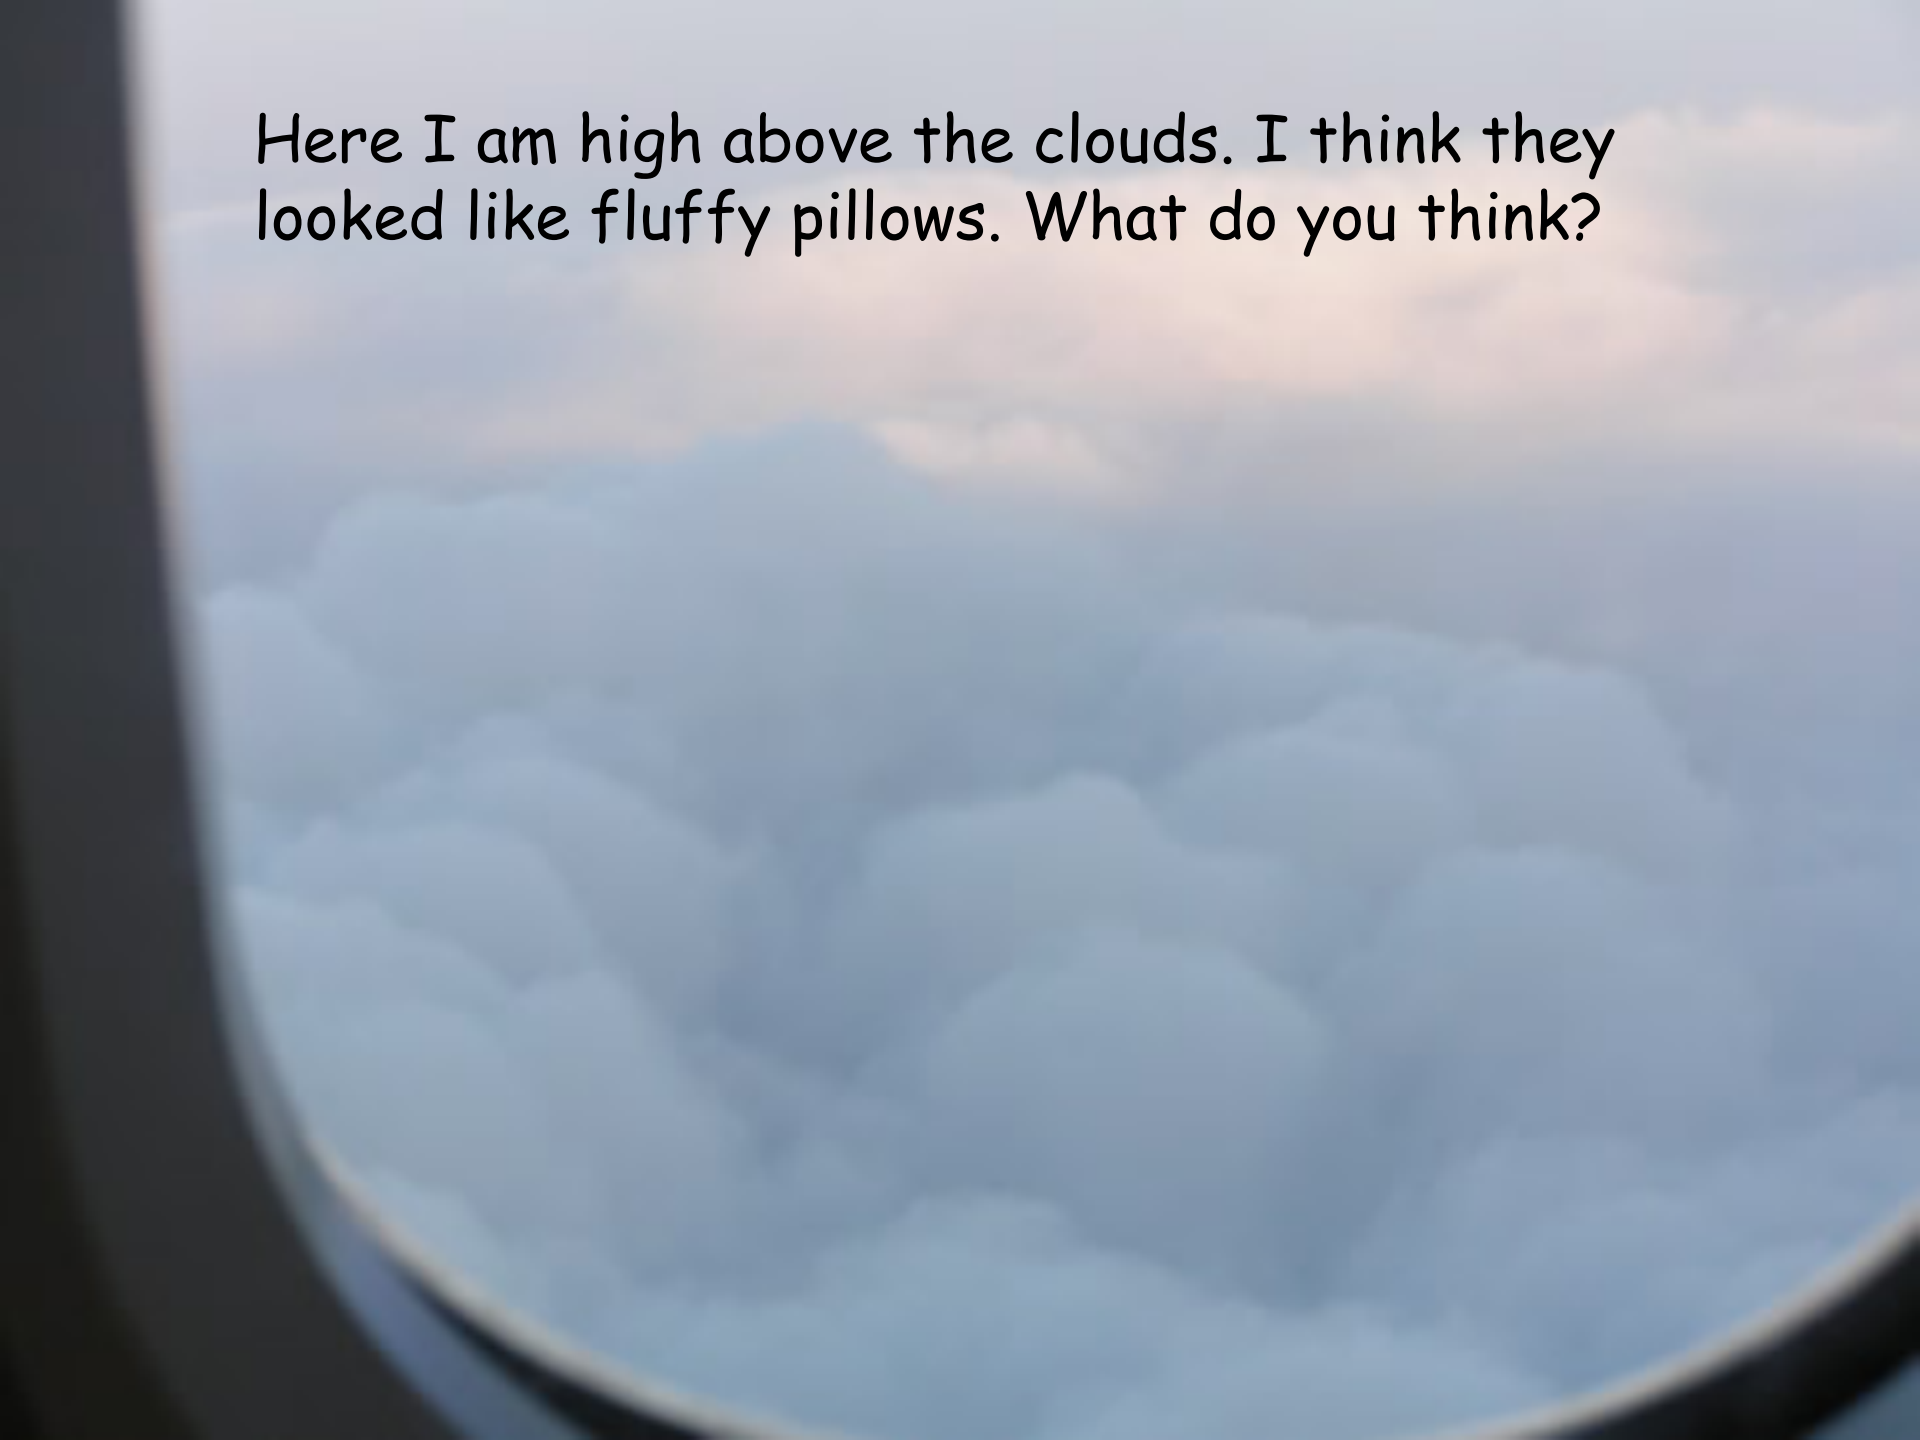

Here I am in the cockpit of the aeroplane, I was very excited.

This is a picture of London which I took out of the Aeroplane.

Here I am high above the clouds. I think they looked like fluffy pillows. What do you think?

This is Harare airport in Zimbabwe. I was very glad to get off the plane and stretch my little bear legs. It had been a very long flight.

This is Harare the capital of Zimbabwe. What can you see?
Are there things in this photograph that you would find in Eckington?

Harare is a very big and beautiful city, I went out and saw lots of very interesting things while I was there.

What a strange sign! What do you think it means?

I saw this on the way to the Victoria Falls National Park. Have you ever seen a sign like this at home?

This is plane I flew over the Victoria Falls in. I think I was very brave! What do you think the Victoria Falls are?

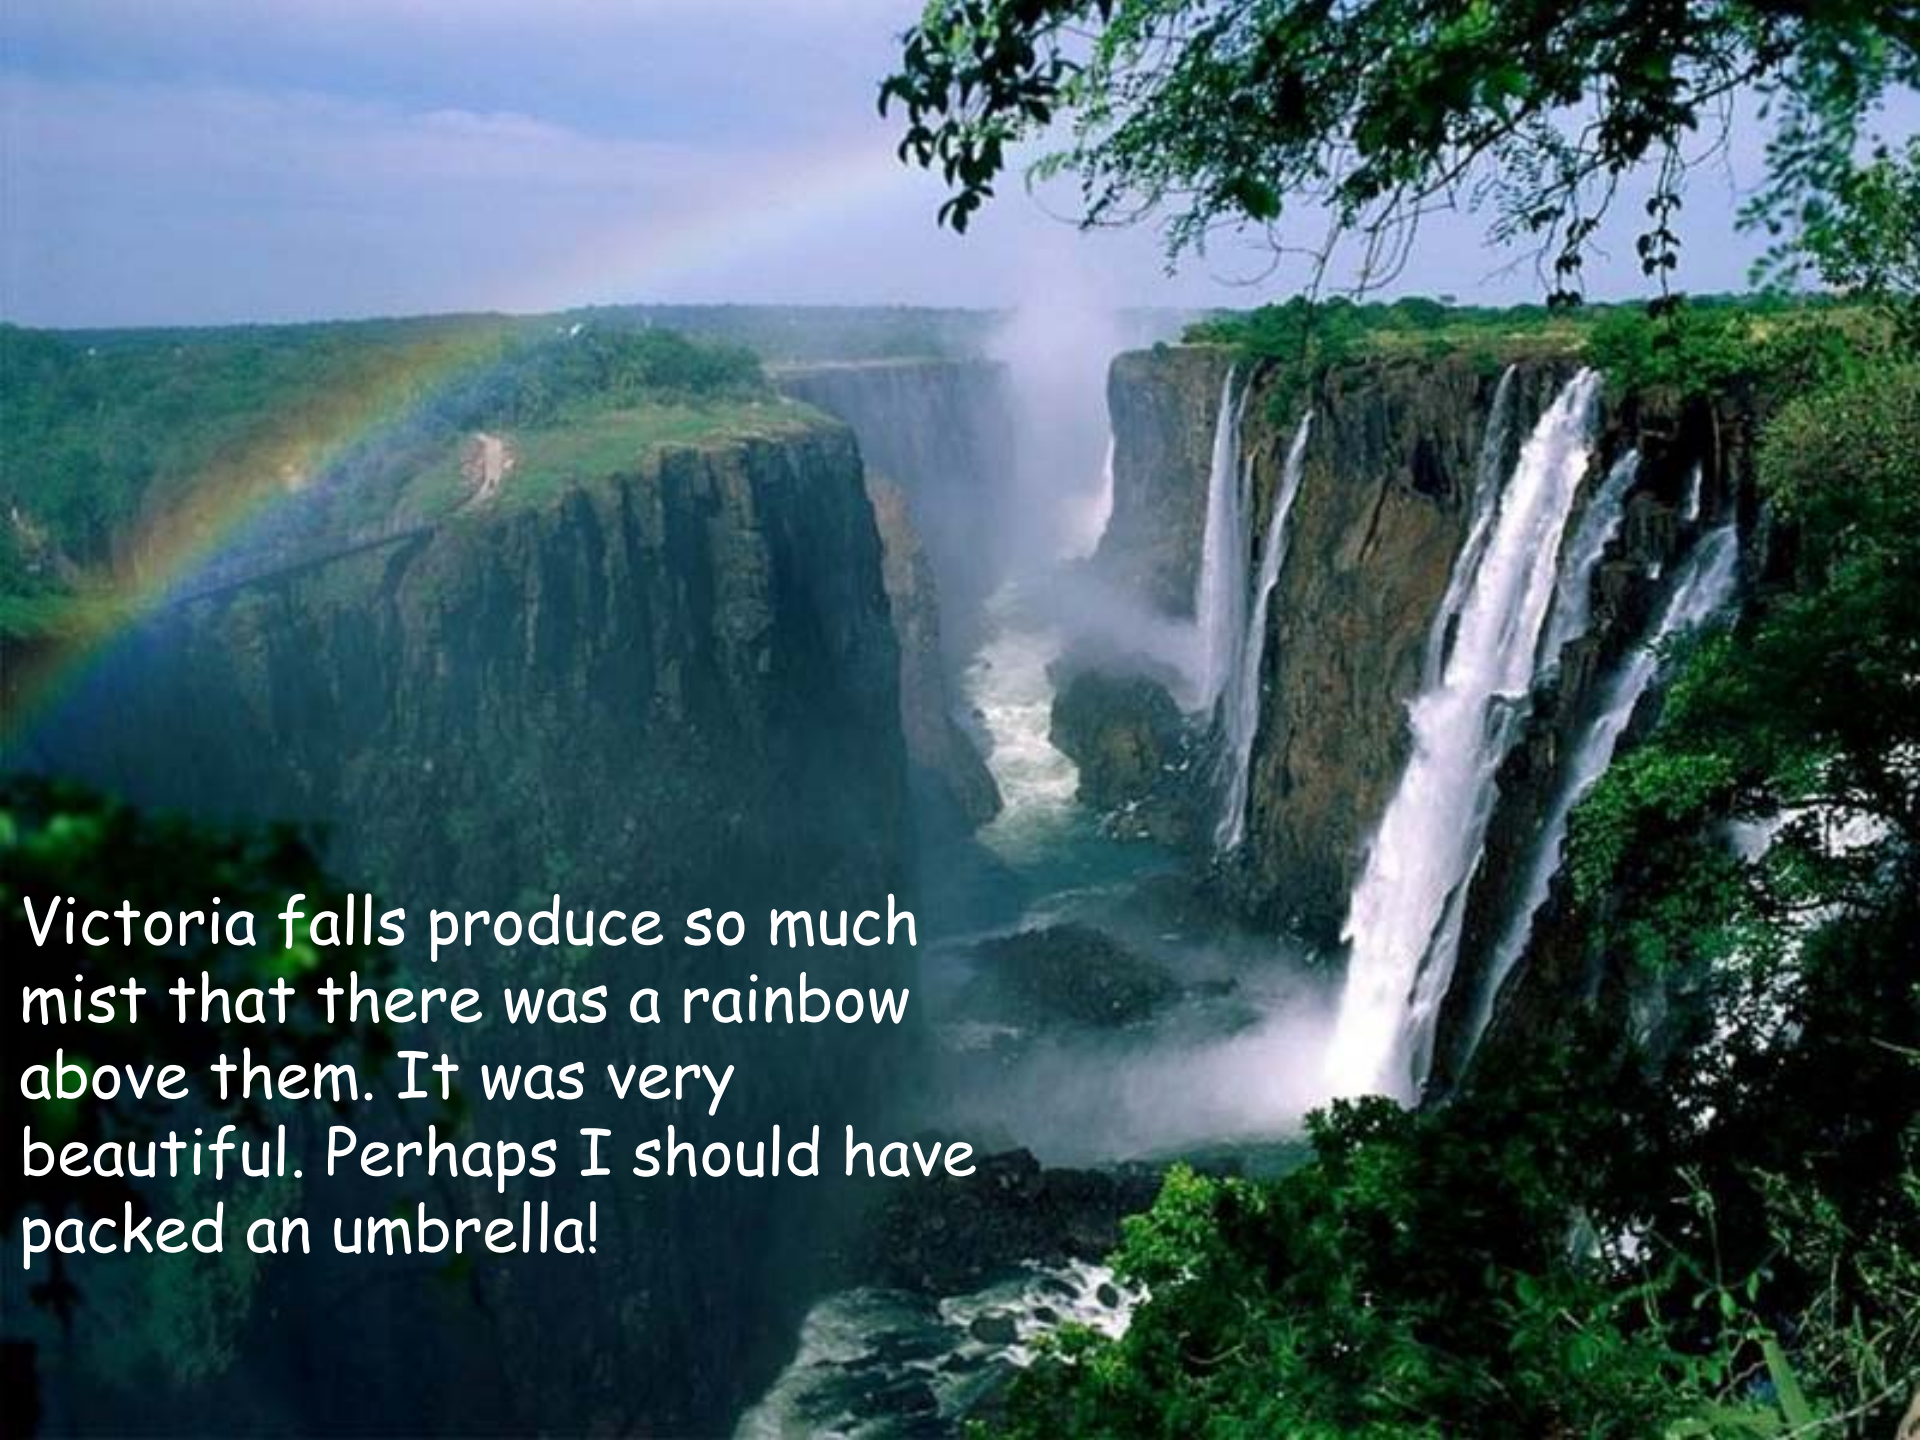

This is Victoria Falls. It is the widest waterfall in the world. I got very wet when I visited it.

A wide-angle photograph of Victoria Falls, showing the massive scale of the water cascading over the edge of a plateau. The water is white and frothy as it falls into a deep gorge. A vibrant rainbow is visible in the mist rising from the falls, arching across the sky. The surrounding landscape is lush with green vegetation, and the sky is a clear, bright blue.

Victoria falls produce so much mist that there was a rainbow above them. It was very beautiful. Perhaps I should have packed an umbrella!

This is a market near Victoria Falls that I visited. I was surprised to see the lady carrying a box on her head! What can you see?

This photograph shows a dam across the Zambezi river. The Zambezi river is the largest river in Zimbabwe. I was flying over it to go on safari. What is a safari?

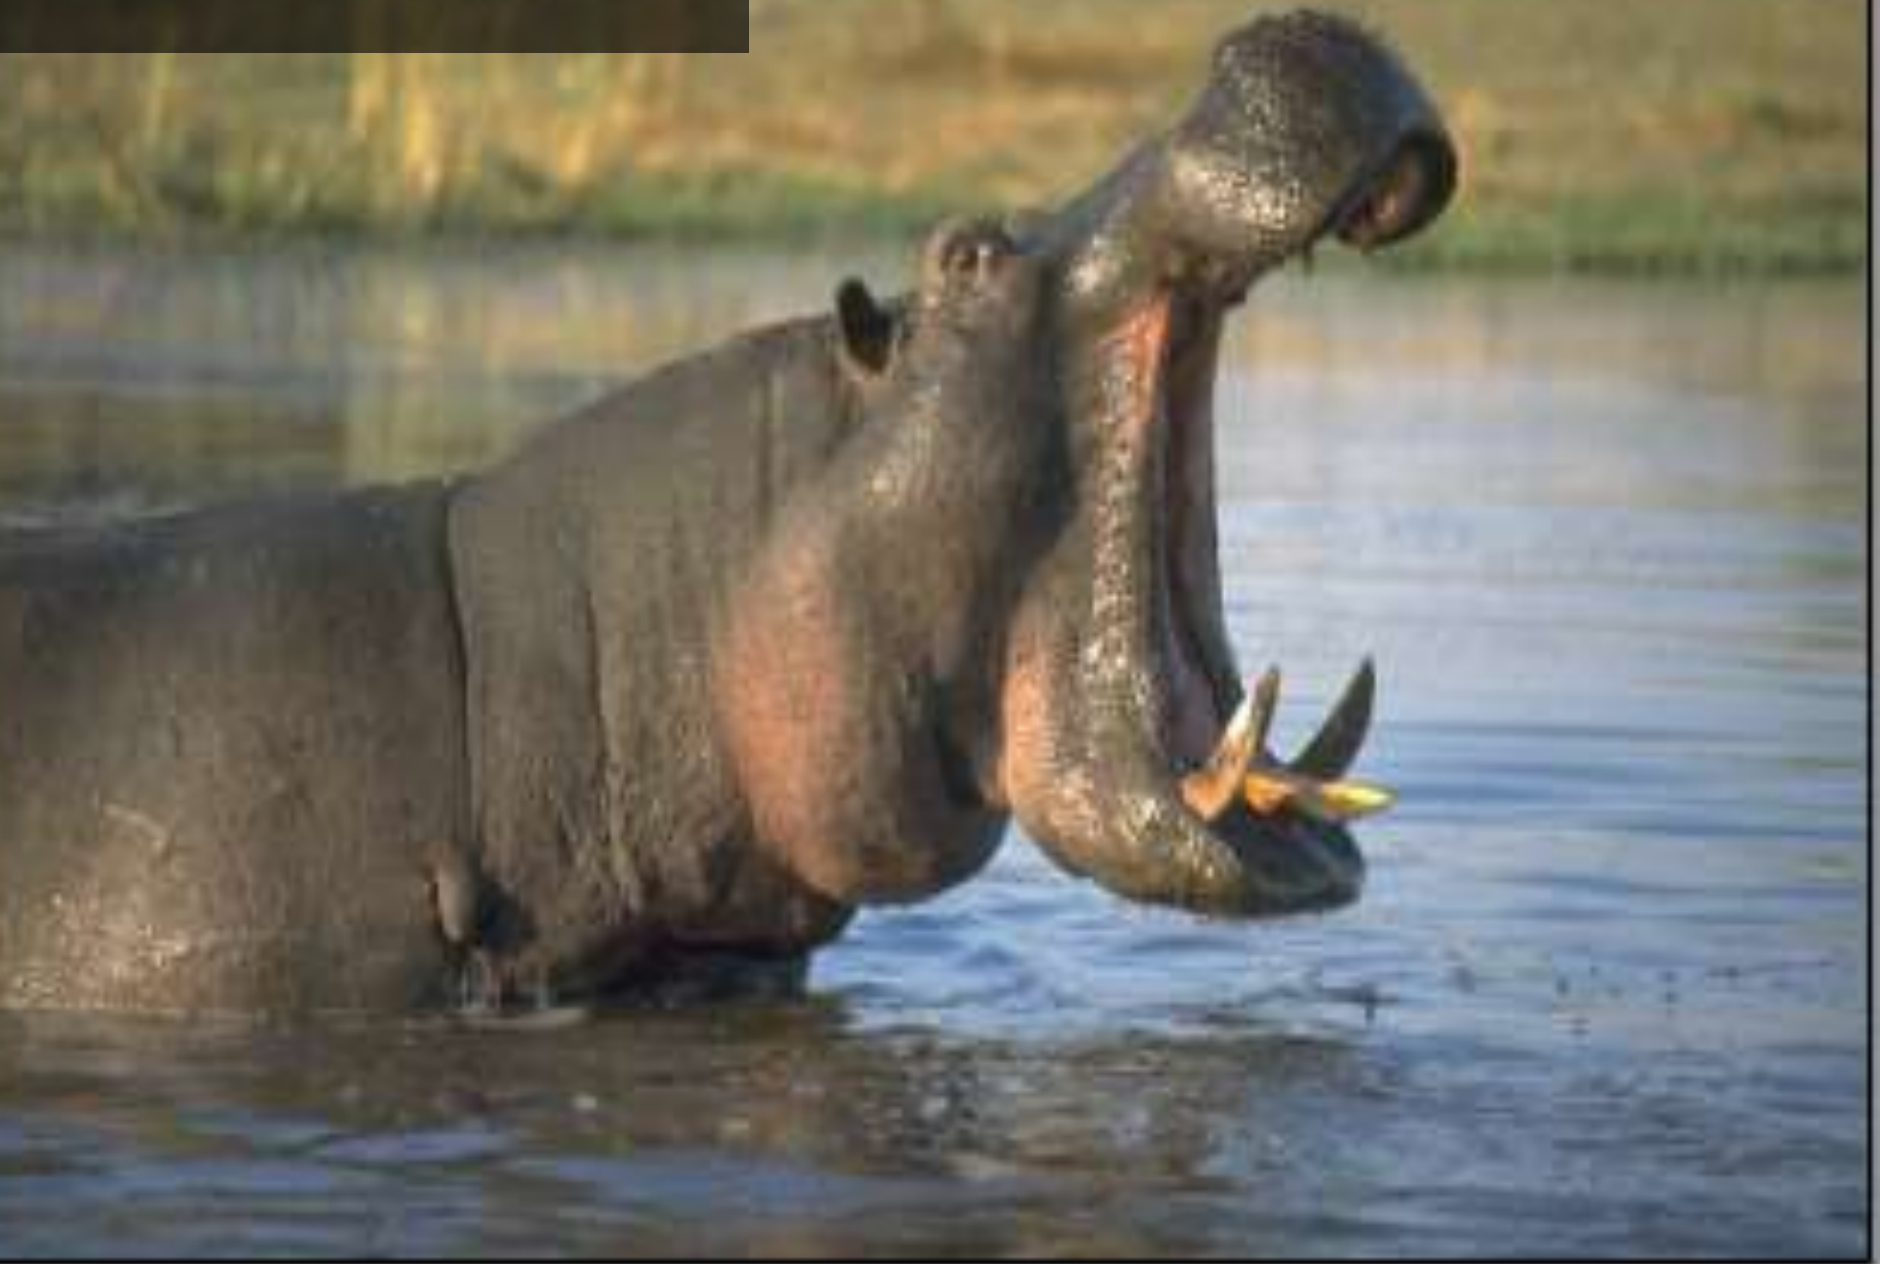

This is the house I stayed in while I visited my friend and went on Safari. I liked it because I thought it was really pretty. Would you like to live in this house? What shapes can you see?

What animal is this?

The weather in Zimbabwe was quite hot. I think she was trying to cool down. What animal is this?

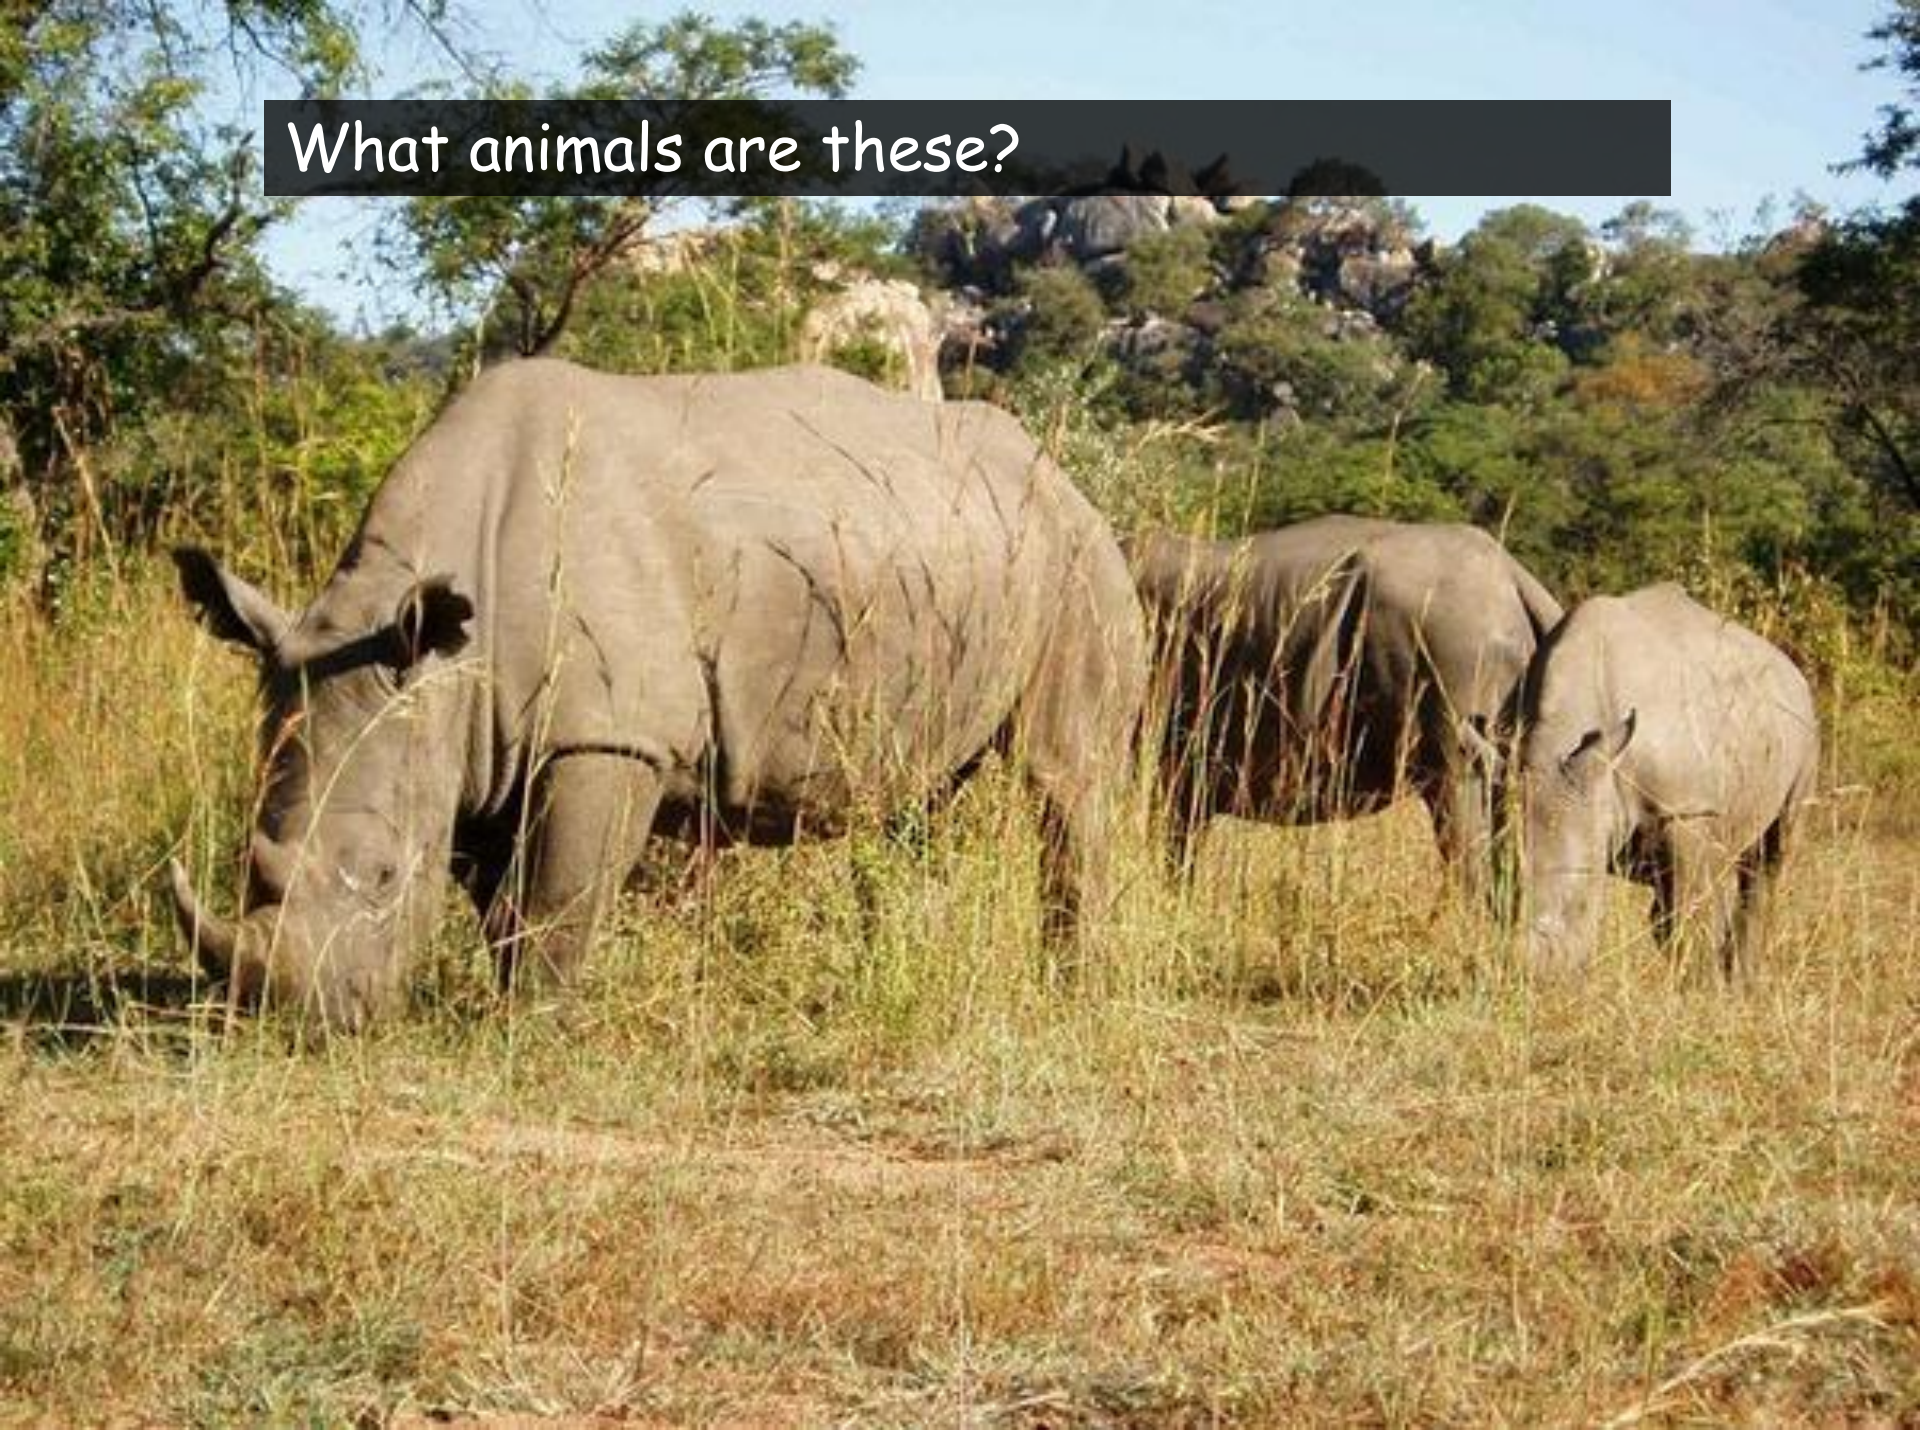

What animal are these? I made sure I was very quiet.

What animals are these?

What animals can you see here?

What did I learn about Africa.

Africa is a very big, much, much bigger than England.

The weather is mainly dry and sunny, although it does rain a lot in the rainy season.

Africa has many fantastic animals which do not live in England (good job!)

Africa was very beautiful and I would like to go again.

Maybe I could book another holiday to Africa at the Nursery Travel Agents!

Love
