

For the magic spoon game, you write a list of end sounds down the page. To begin, use two sounds and then building it up to three. Then write a beginning sound on the back of a spoon or perhaps stick the sound on with sticky labels or paper and cello tape. You start by putting the spoon at the top of the list, in front of the end sounds. E.g. spoon "m" end sound "an" then read across by sounding and blending the sounds and you read "man". Once again, you decide is this a real word? Do I know what it is?

Or, Is it a nonsense word? You can discuss this with each word as you move down your list. You can change the beginning sound on your spoon and also the end sounds on your list!
