Snakes

This page is from a fact book on snakes.

SNAKES AND PEOPLE

Snakes have been given a bad name for years because a small number of species cause many human deaths. Over 10,000 people die from snake-bite poisoning every year.

The main killer snakes are Indian cobras and Russell's and saw-scaled vipers in India; pit vipers, rattlesnakes and coral snakes in South America; puff adders, Egyptian cobras and saw-scaled vipers in Africa; tiger and brown snakes in Australia; and the diamondback rattlesnakes in the United States.

▼ Snake charmers perform on the streets of some Asian and African countries. Cobras are often used in these acts, but their fangs are removed so that they cannot inject their powerful poisons.

IF YOU ARE IN SNAKE COUNTRY ...

Wear shoes, socks and trousers.

Do not poke around under rocks, logs and other places where snakes might be hiding.
Do not go out without an adult.

IF YOU ARE LUCKY ENOUGH TO SEE A SNAKE ...

Remember that although most snakes are harmless you should not touch them.

Stand still and allow it to slide away to safety.

IF YOU ARE EVER BITTEN BY A SNAKE TELL AN ADULT AS

- 2 Name two countries where cobras live.
- 3 Write down the words used in the first paragraph that tell you that not all snakes are dangerous.
