The Good Samaritan

A Jewish man was out for a stroll.

Two thieves jumped out and robbed him.

They beat him up and left him for dead.

A priest came walking by and saw the man.

Did he help?

No, he passed on by.

Then, a Levite came walking by and saw the injured man.
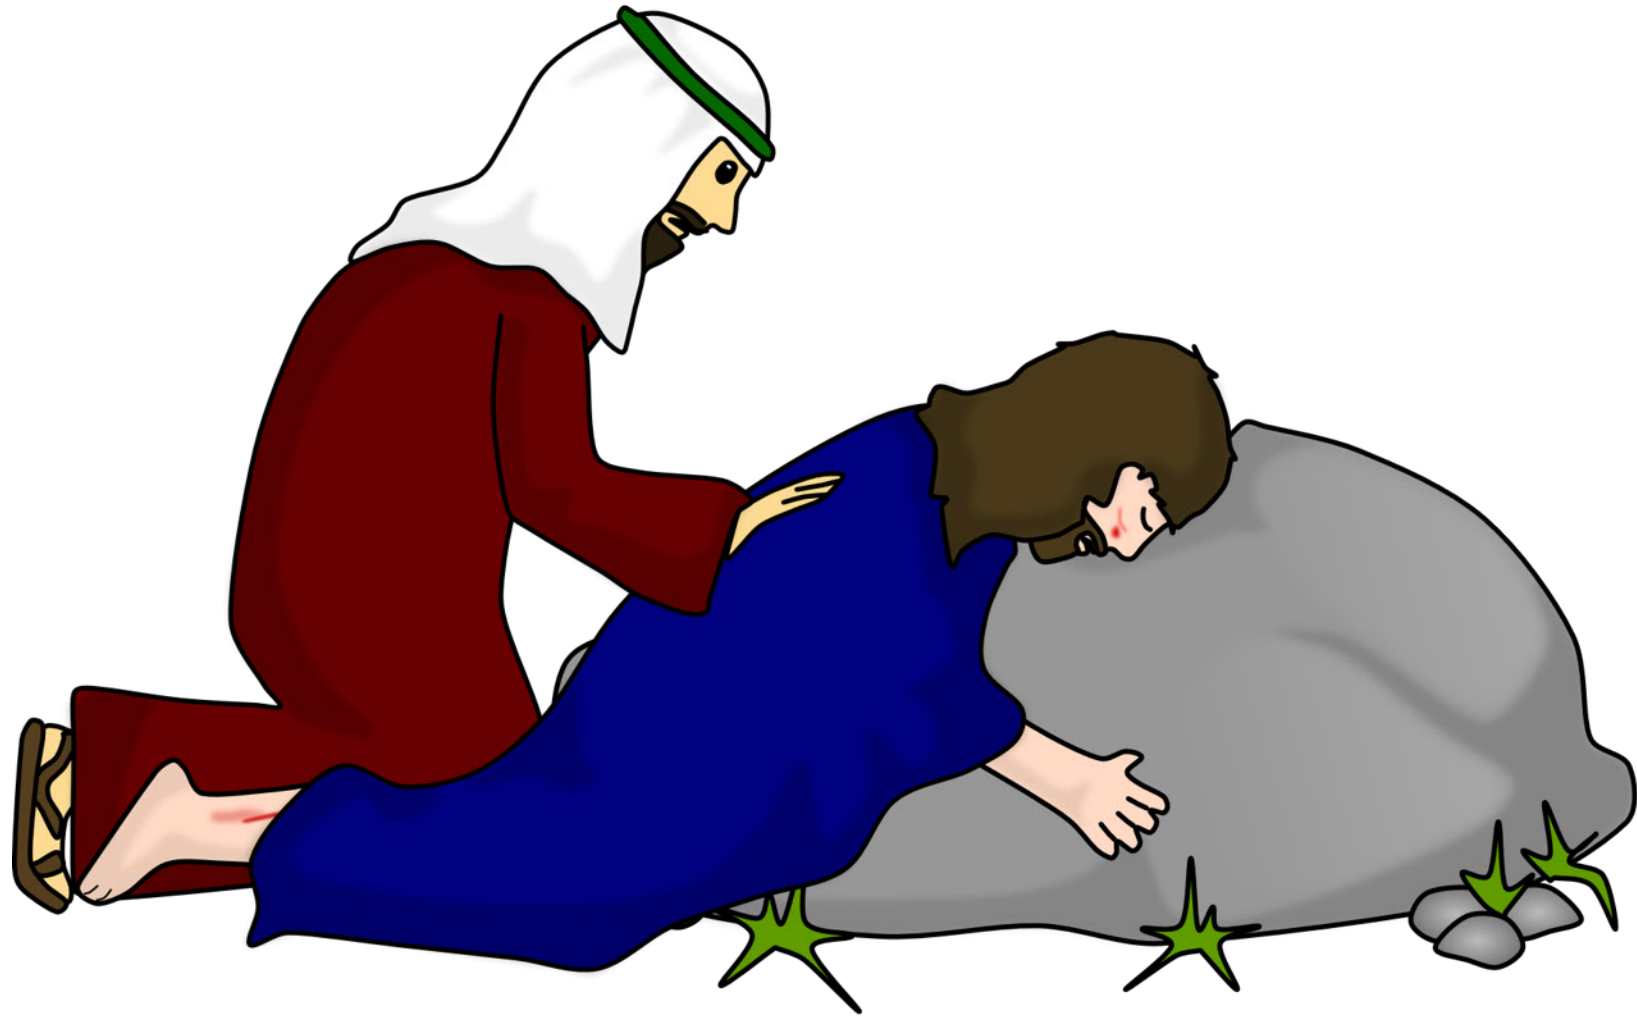

Did he help?

No, he passed on by.

Then, a Samaritan came by.
Jews and Samaritans didn't normally get along.
He saw the dying man.

Did he help?

Yes! The Samaritan just couldn't leave the Jewish man to die.
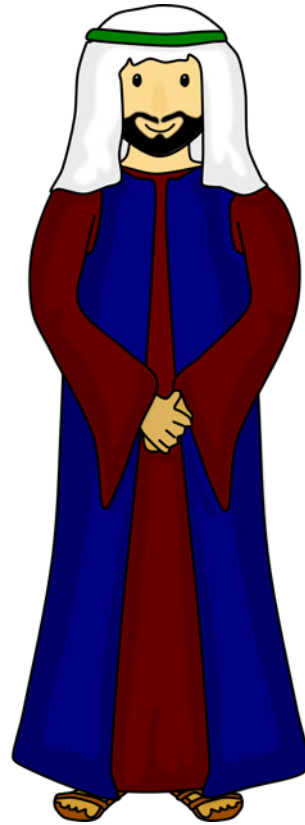

He put his cloak on the man...

... and took him to an inn.

He bought expensive bandages, oil and ointment...

… and paid the innkeeper to look after him until he was better.

Even though Jews and Samaritans didn't normally get along, the Samaritan was a true neighbour to the Jewish man.
