

Classroom area keys

These can be laminated and used to restrict the number of children using particular areas, e.g. a role play area. Each child who wants to play in the area must take a numbered key, which they hang round their neck on a piece of ribbon. They can then go and play in the area. If there are no keys left, the child must wait until someone else comes out & replaces their key on the hooks provided.

Classroom area keys

These can be laminated and used to restrict the number of children using particular areas, e.g. a role play area. Each child who wants to play in the area must take a numbered key, which they hang round their neck on a piece of ribbon. They can then go and play in the area. If there are no keys left, the child must wait until someone else comes out & replaces their key on the hooks provided.

Classroom area keys

These can be laminated and used to restrict the number of children using particular areas, e.g. a role play area. Each child who wants to play in the area must take a numbered key, which they hang round their neck on a piece of ribbon. They can then go and play in the area. If there are no keys left, the child must wait until someone else comes out & replaces their key on the hooks provided.

Classroom area keys

These can be laminated and used to restrict the number of children using particular areas, e.g. a role play area. Each child who wants to play in the area must take a numbered key, which they hang round their neck on a piece of ribbon. They can then go and play in the area. If there are no keys left, the child must wait until someone else comes out & replaces their key on the hooks provided.

Classroom area keys

These can be laminated and used to restrict the number of children using particular areas, e.g. a role play area. Each child who wants to play in the area must take a numbered key, which they hang round their neck on a piece of ribbon. They can then go and play in the area. If there are no keys left, the child must wait until someone else comes out & replaces their key on the hooks provided.

Classroom area keys

These can be laminated and used to restrict the number of children using particular areas, e.g. a role play area. Each child who wants to play in the area must take a numbered key, which they hang round their neck on a piece of ribbon. They can then go and play in the area. If there are no keys left, the child must wait until someone else comes out & replaces their key on the hooks provided.

