A Moorish Idol fish, also known as a havsängel, is shown swimming in an aquarium. The fish has a distinctive appearance with a large, white, fan-shaped dorsal fin that extends far back along its body. Its body is primarily white with a prominent black stripe running vertically down the side. The head is dark, and the fish has long, thin, hair-like appendages extending from its snout. The background consists of dark, textured rock formations and some yellowish coral or sponge-like structures.
