A wicked fairy turned a prince into a frog.

She put him into a well.

A princess was playing with her golden ball.

The ball fell into the well.

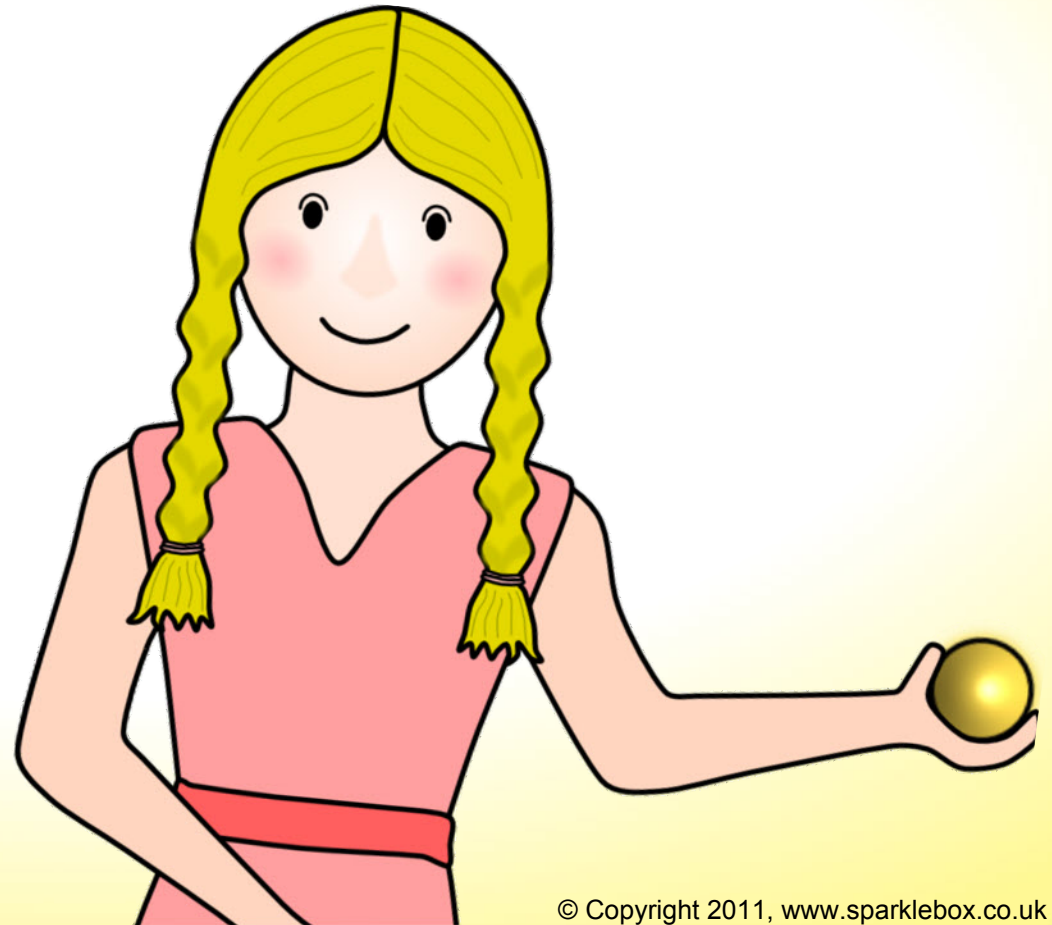

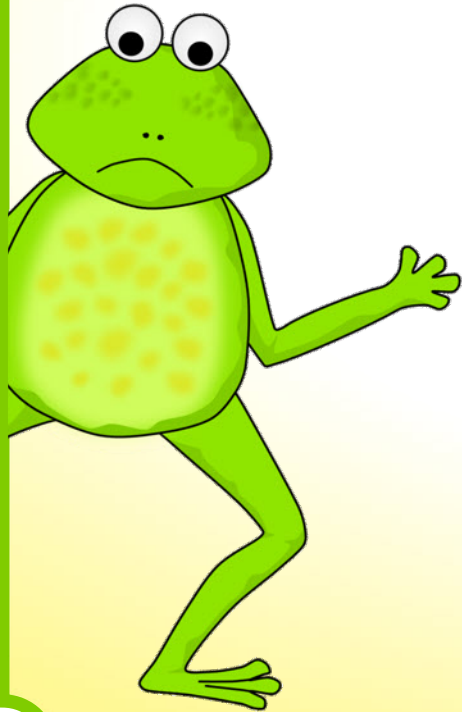

I promise to love love you,
let you eat from my plate
and sleep on my bed.

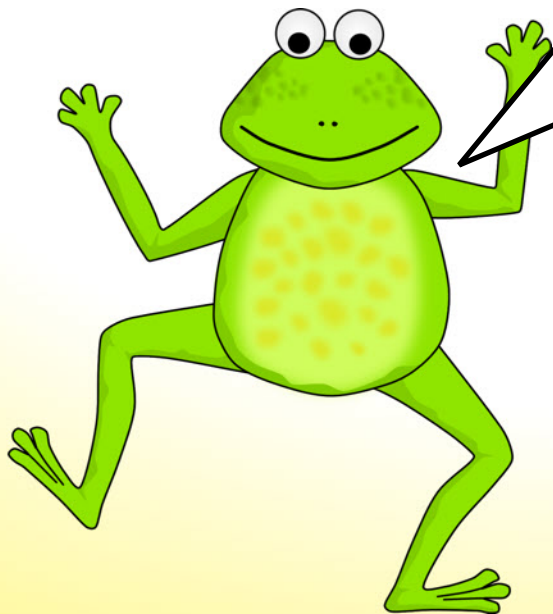

The frog fetched the ball.

The princess snatched the ball and ran back to the palace.

From the deep and mossy well,
Little princess, where I dwell,
When you wept in grief and pain
I brought your golden ball again.

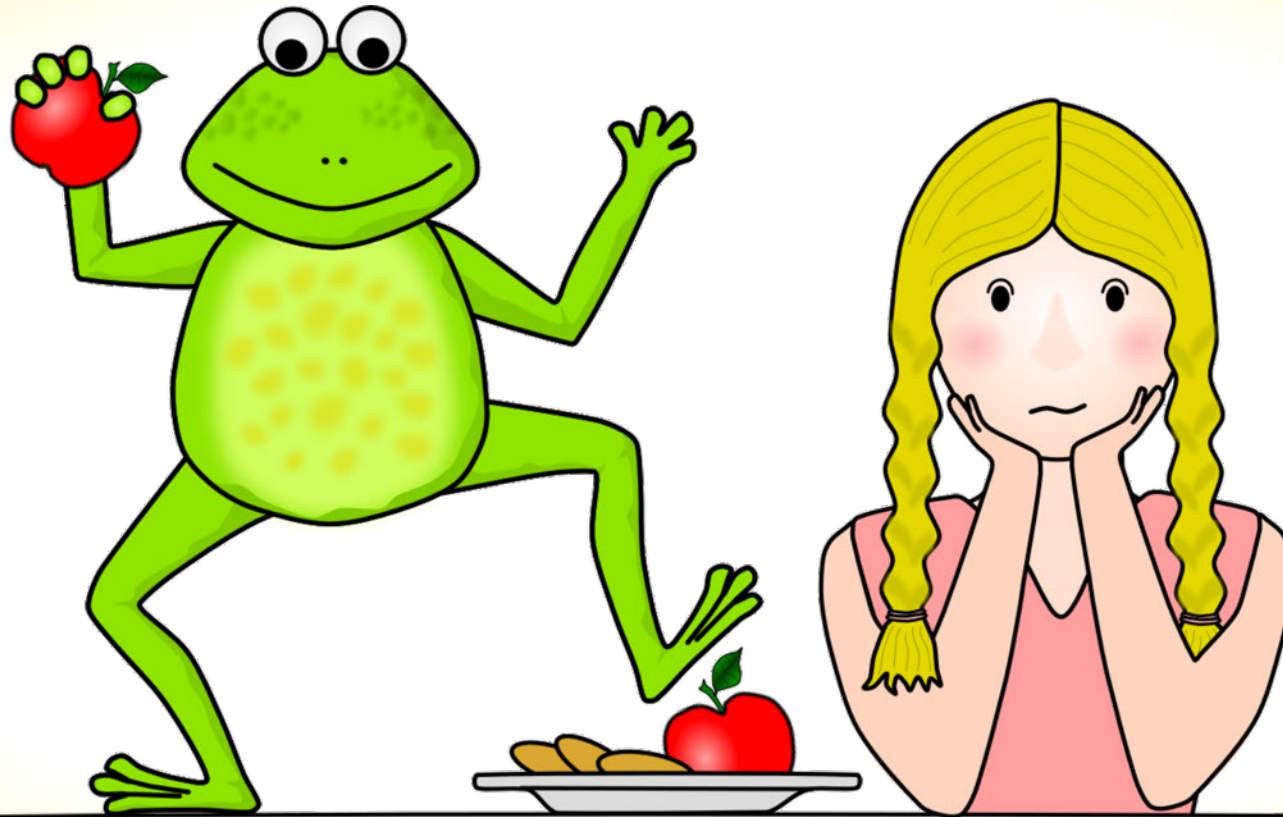

The princess was surprised.
She told her father what had happened.

You must keep your promises.

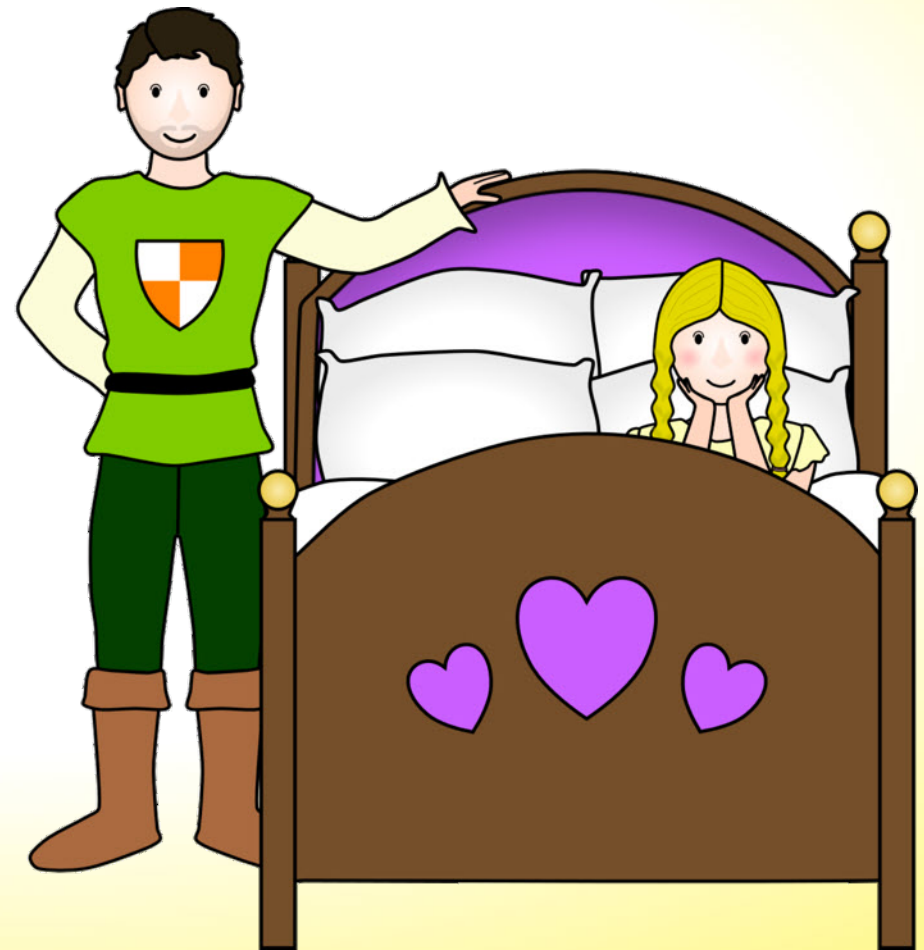

The frog ate from her plate.

The frog slept on her bed.

After the third night,
the princess woke and there stood a handsome prince!

The evil spell was broken.
The prince and princess married and lived happily ever after.
