LEADING OFF

SDSU Kickoff Classic

San Diego, Calif. (SDSU Softball Stadium)

Thursday, Feb. 10- vs. Middle Tennessee State (3:30 p.m.)
 Friday, Feb. 11- at San Diego State (7 p.m.)
 Saturday, Feb. 12- vs. Boise State (11:30 a.m.) | vs. UIC (4:30 p.m.)
 Sunday, Feb. 13- vs. Cal Poly (11:30 a.m.)

Leading Off » Stanford softball opens the 2022 season this weekend at the SDSU Season Kickoff, Feb. 10-13, in San Diego, Calif. All five games will be held at the SDSU Softball Stadium, with Friday's game against the host Aztecs being streamed on the Mountain West Network.

The Field » Stanford will play against Middle Tennessee State (Feb. 10, 3:30 p.m.), San Diego State (Feb. 11, 7 p.m.), Boise State (Feb. 12, 11:30 a.m.), UIC (Feb. 12, 4:30 p.m.) and Cal Poly (Feb. 13, 11:30 a.m.). San Diego State was predicted to win the Mountain West.

Stanford leads the all-time series against Cal Poly (20-6), Middle Tennessee State (1-0), UIC (7-1) and San Diego State (13-7). The Broncos lead the all-time series against the Cardinal, 1-3. The lone win against Boise State came at the Kajikawa Classic in 2018.

Year Five » Stanford enters the fifth season under the direction of head coach Jessica Allister. Allister has led the Cardinal to postseason appearances in 2019 and 2021, with an overall record of 112-77 at Stanford. Allister is joined by associate head coach Jessica Merchant and pitching coach Tori Nyberg for the fifth straight season.

Since 2019 Stanford has gone 88-46 under the direction of Allister and her staff.

Back to the Postseason » Stanford softball was selected for the NCAA tournament for the 18th time in program history, earning the No. 2 seed in the Fayetteville Regional. The Cardinal was joined at the regional by host-Arkansas, South Dakota State and Manhattan – with Stanford finishing the tournament 2-2 after advancing to the regional title game for the first time since 2013.

The postseason appearance was the second-straight for the Cardinal – the 2020 postseason being canceled due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Stanford is now 44-40 all-time in the regional round, while head coach Jessica Allister has led the program to nine postseason appearances – spanning her time as a player, an assistant coach and a head coach.

No Delayed Start This Time Around » The context around Stanford's highly successful season is what makes what the program has accomplished in 2021 all the more impressive. Due to restrictions from Santa Clara County, the Cardinal was not able to have its roster on campus for the fall quarter. Only graduate students were allowed on campus, and equipment could not be shared across more than two households.

Due to continuing county restriction at the turn of the new year, Stanford's first day of team practice was Feb. 4 – leaving a 15-day build-up to the season opener against San Jose State on Feb. 19. Players arrived on campus for the first time on Jan. 23, and then completed a 10-day quarantine period.

This season, Stanford was able to have a full offseason of development beginning in the fall. The Cardinal did not play any fall games but were able to conduct full team practices during the entire offseason.

NOTABLES

A Pair of Milestones for Allister » In her fourth season on The Farm, Allister achieved a pair of milestones this season. On March 27, Allister won her 100th game as the head coach at Stanford with an 8-0, run-rule victory over Utah, becoming only the second coach in program history to win 100 games (John Rittman). The Stanford alumna is 112- 77 at Stanford.

Allister also won her 400th game as a head coach, again with an 8-0, run-rule victory over No. 5 Washington, May 14. She is the fourth active Pac-12 coach to achieve 400 career wins, regardless of institution, with a 402-185 record. Her .686 winning percentage is 21st among active head coaches with at least 10 years of experience.

Pac-12 Put on Watch » Despite the difficult schedule and the delayed start to team activities, Stanford won nine Pac-12 games – its most conference victories since the 2013 season (13-11). This is despite the series against California, the eighth-place team in the conference standings, being canceled due to COVID-19 developments within the California program. Stanford went 2-1 against the Bears in three nonconference games – we will let you draw whatever conclusion you can there.

Stanford won a game at No. 13/14 Arizona State (April 9), its first win in Tempe since 2011, and trailed the Sun Devils on run-differential by only four runs, 22-18. Two weeks later, the Cardinal picked up its first Top 10 victories on the road, and its first wins in Eugene since 2011, splitting the weekend series against No. 6/7 Oregon. Stanford closed the season by splitting the weekend series against No. 5 Washington, May 13-15.

Plenty of Honors for the Cardinal » Stanford collected six All-Pac-12 honors on the season, with five players landing on the all-conference teams. Alana Vawter led the Cardinal by landing on the first team and the all-freshmen team – becoming the first Stanford player to earn first-team honors since 2015. Teaghan Cowles and Emily Young earned the second All-Pac-12 honors of their career with both landing on the third team. Taylor Gindlesperger and Montana Dixon picked up their first all-conference honors, landing on the second team and all-defensive team, respectively.

Both Vawter and Gindlesperger were named to the NFCA All-West Region's first and third teams, respectively.

The Harder the Schedule the Sweeter the Results » No schedule is easy when one resides in the Pac-12, and Stanford had one of the toughest closing stretches of the season. Over the final 25 games, Stanford played 20 games against Top 15 teams, 16 games against Top 10 teams, and its final eight games of the season were against Top 5 teams. To make matters more difficult, the conference moved to a format of four game series with doubleheaders on Saturday – only the first game of the doubleheader counted towards the conference standings.

Stanford was one of 19 teams in the country with 20-or-more victories against the top 100 in RPI.

Preseason Poll » Stanford has been predicted to finish sixth in the Pac-12 in a vote among the league's coaches. The Cardinal earned 31 points in the preseason poll to trail behind fifth-place predicted Arizona State by a mere six points. The five teams predicted ahead of the Cardinal are all ranked by each of the five polls.

Nationally Recognized » The Cardinal enters the 2022 season appearing in three of the four Top 25 polls. While the Cardinal are not ranked they are knocking on the door of the Top 25. Stanford received 19 points in the USA Softball/ESPN poll and are the second team outside of the Top 25. In the NFCA Coaches' Poll, the Cardinal received four points to be the seventh team outside of the rankings.

While D1Softball does not have a receiving votes category, Stanford was recognized as one of the 10 teams outside the Top-25 to keep your eye on.

Senior Class » Stanford is led by a seven-member senior class this season: Emily Young, Molly Millar, Hannah Matteson, Emily Schultz, Kate Cressey, Taylor Gindlesperger and Emily Klingaman. The group has gone 88-46 in their career on The Farm with two straight postseason appearances.

We Got Next » The future for the Cardinal continues to look bright. Stanford signed the nation's 10th-ranked recruiting class in November, bolstering its 2023 roster with the additions of NiJaree Canady, Kyra Chan, Emily Jones, River Mahler and Allison Morikawa. All five rank in the Top 100 nationally, with Canady, Jones and Mahler ranking in the Top 10. Both Canady (Kansas) and Mahler (Washington) are ranked as their respective state's top softball player, according to MaxPreps.
